Closer Ties Sought

The British-French bloc sought closer ties today with its new ally, Turkey, as a Polish protest to the Danzig Senate sharpened the issue between Germany and Poland over the free city.

In London, following yesterday's announcement by Prime Minister Chamberlain that Turkey and Britain would aid each other in the event of "aggression leading to war in the Mediterranean area," political commentators predicted Turkey would gain important British trade and munitions loans.

The French government approved the British-Turkish accord and French leaders hinted that France expected to reach a similar agreement soon. Informed sources in Paris hailed the addition of Turkey to the British-French line-up as a sign that Soviet Russia also intends to join and as an attraction to Bulgaria and Yugoslavia.

A Danzig Senate order forbidding a memorial service last night for the Polish hero, Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, on grounds it might cause disorder brought a Polish protest and charge that the Danzig government could not "guarantee peace."

Would Send Troops
Polish newspapers declared Polish troops should be sent to Danzig to assure order there if the free city's Senate cannot accept responsibility for it.

In Vienna, Catholic Church authorities interpreted a Nazi order that personnel changes in the clergy must have party sanction as meaning Nazis would control appointments of new vicars, pastors and other church dignitaries. Informed sources expressed belief that Vienna church authorities would ask the Vatican's advice and that much depended on how stringently the new rule was applied.

White-haired and visibly aged after more than a year's imprisonment by Nazi secret police in Vienna, Baron Louis Rothschild arrived in Paris, freed, a friend said, on condition not "to discuss his imprisonment under any circumstances."

Taken Into Custody
The baron was taken into custody after Germany annexed Austria March 13, 1938, and was held in the Hotel Metropole, now Gestapo (secret police) headquarters in Vienna, where Kurt Schuschnigg, last chancellor of independent Austria, still is a prisoner. Joseph C. Grew, United States ambassador to Japan, conferred again with Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita. It was believed the status of the international settlement in Shanghai was discussed.

Sudden Japanese occupation of the Kulsung international settlement at Amoy, China, yesterday, was interpreted in authoritative quarters in Shanghai as a test of the reaction of foreign governments. A Japanese spokesman warned that similar action against the Shanghai international settlement "may be necessary."

Admiral Harry T. Yarnell, commander-in-chief of the United States Asiatic fleet, sent a destroyer to Amoy to investigate the situation there.

Putnam Says Men Kidnaped Him and Then Gave Warning

Publisher Is Found in House at Bakersfield, Calif., Few Hours After He Says He Was Abducted and Told to Stop Publishing Book About Hitler; Earlier Threats

Bakersfield, Calif., May 13 (AP)—Bound and gagged, George Palmer Putnam, 52, Hollywood publisher and husband of the late Amelia Earhart, was found in an incomplete house here today, a few hours after he was kidnaped from his North Hollywood home.

Putnam, unhurt, said the kidnapers demanded the name of the author of the anonymous book "The Man Who Killed Hitler" and suggested it would be "healthier" if he ceased printing it.

A statewide search for the pair and for Putnam's car, in which they brought him here, was ordered by sheriff's deputies. "They were very decent to me," Putnam declared. "They didn't rough me at all."

The publisher said he refused their demands and recalled ruthlessly that he had "thought the other warnings were phony." Receipt of a bullet-ridden copy of the book, two letters and a telephone call threatening his life were reported to Los Angeles police within the past month and on one occasion he fired two shots at a man who was climbing a tree near his bedroom window.

"I'm a little upset but I'm not hurt," Putnam said as he sat in the sheriff's office here.

Describes Events

Then he described the events of last night. "About five o'clock," he recalled, "my secretary, (Miss Josephine Berger) received a telephone call supposed to have come from Rex Cole (Hollywood actor's agent and close friend of Putnam)."

"The caller said Cole had an important matter to discuss and wanted me to come to his house. Shortly before 7:30, I walked into the garage. There two men jumped on me and pushed me into the car."

"They blindfolded me and tied my hands. We drove for about an hour. They conversed between themselves in German, but both spoke English, one fluently and in an educated way. I asked them what they wanted and reminded them that kidnaping was a serious offense."

"They said they wanted to know the man who had contributed to the Hitler book from the German end. I told them I didn't know and stuck to that story."

No Threats

"Finally they stopped the car. One of them got out. I am not sure, but I believe he went to talk with someone in a car which was following mine. Soon he returned and we drove on. They did not threaten me, but suggested that I give up publishing the book. Then I could tell we were driving off the main road."

"They walked me, blindfolded, for a short distance and then made me lie down on a board. They taped my legs and hands and mouth tightly and left, telling me I would be found in the morning."

"I managed to work loose the bandage on my mouth after an hour or so. I'm not sure how long. I called for help and some people came. Then they called the officers. I discovered when they freed me that because I was in an unfinished house, I would have been found as soon as it was daylight. Obviously they did not intend to hurt me."

Cole and other friends in Hollywood were en route here to return him to his home.

Police Chemists Make Analysis Of Physician's Prescriptions

Philadelphia, May 13 (AP)—A dozen prescriptions written by a middle-aged physician charged with conspiring with an insurance-murder gang were analyzed by police chemists today to determine whether they were a means by which victims were fed poison in fatal doses.

Seized from druggists, several of whom were questioned, the prescriptions were among hundreds examined. Dr. Edward Burke, one of the chemists, said the 12 were retained for further study after it was discovered that "a few" called for poison.

Assistant District Attorney Vincent P. McDevitt charged weeks ago, when the physician first was arrested, that he had "furnished poison and obtained prospects" for the ring, which police say may have killed more than 100 persons for insurance money in several eastern states.

At the same time, detectives said questioning of the druggists, a woman fortune teller and a ward politician indicated that an "alarming" number of persons may have been unwilling "tools" of the ring.

Police Captain James Kelly quoted the politician as saying he obtained 11 insurance prospects for Paul Petrillo, a round-shouldered tailor charged with murder, because he was threatened with the "evil eye" if he refused.

"We've got the evil eye on your brothers and sisters and they're dying," the politician said he was told. "The only way they can be saved is by us breaking the spell. We won't break the spell unless you do what we tell you."

The fortune-teller, a 69-year-old gray-haired woman, was described by Kelly as a long-time associate of Petrillo in witchcraft. He said investigators suspected she was used to further the interests of the murder gang.

No charges were placed against the druggists, the politician or the fortune teller, Kelly said.

Dewey and Botein Are Investigating Insurance Cases

Special Counsel to State Insurance Fund Says 19 Auditors Indicted for Actions

100 Convictions

Worst Feature of Fake Reports Is That Honest Men Pay High Fees, He Says

New York, May 13 (AP)—District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey and a governor's representative today pressed their investigation of instances in which chiseling employers and bribed state accountants were believed to have defrauded the state workmen's compensation insurance fund and private insurance firms of $15,000,000 a year in evaded payroll assessments.

Fake payroll reports, submitted by employers eager to dodge the full tax and certified by the bribed state inspectors, were described.

Bernard Botein, special counsel to the insurance fund, who was appointed more than a year ago by Gov. Lehman to investigate irregularities in employer payments to the fund, said 19 auditors had been indicted. One hundred employers have been convicted.

"As a result of this fraud," Botein said, "honest employers are taxed with higher insurance rates disproportionate to their claim experience."

15 Millions Yearly

"I estimate that the state insurance and private insurance companies are defrauded of $15,000,000 annually in New York state as a result of these practices."

Botein said that about $80,000,000 a year paid in workmen's compensation insurance premiums in New York state, of which about $24,000,000 went into the state fund. He said that examination of between 500 and 600 employers so far had resulted in the restitution of $600,000 to the fund.

District Attorney Dewey said that Joseph Malone, 47, a state auditor who pleaded guilty to accepting illegal fees, had named many of the 80 insurance fund accountants here as bribe-takers. Malone admitted, Dewey's office announced, that the auditors received annual bribes ranging from $20 to $700 for understating employers' payrolls, thus reducing the amount of payment required to the insurance fund.

Dewey said the frauds so far uncovered in his jurisdiction amounted to $3,000,000 and that 50 employers who pleaded guilty or had been convicted in the conspiracy had made restitution of about $100,000. His aids predicted wholesale indictments would be returned within ten days.

Malone was freed under $2,500 bail after promising to cooperate in the inquiry.

Rector at Mount Chosen to Control Largest Province

Very Rev. Wm. T. McCarty Transfers From Esopus Monastery; Other Changes Made

The Very Rev. William T. McCarty, C. SS. R., who was ordained a priest at Mount St. Alphonsus, Esopus, where he has been serving as rector, has been appointed head of the largest Redemptorist province in the world at Baltimore, to succeed the Very Rev. Andrew B. Kuhn, C. SS. R., who has been transferred to St. Alphonsus Church in New York city.

Father McCarthy, the new provincial of the Baltimore Province, was born in Crossinville, Pa., on August 11, 1889. He made his preparatory studies for the priesthood in St. Mary's College, North East, Pa.

On August 2, 1910, he made his religious vows at Ilchester, Md., and on June 10, 1915, he was ordained a priest at Mount St. Alphonsus.

For one year he taught at St. Mary's, North East, Md., and then was transferred to the seminary at Esopus, where he was professor of philosophy and prefect of students for 13 years.

From 1930 to 1933 he was assistant rector at the Mission Church in Boston and from 1933 to the present time he was rector of the seminary at Esopus.

Among the other additional changes and reappointments announced are:

Mount St. Alphonsus (Seminary), the Rev. M. Gounley.

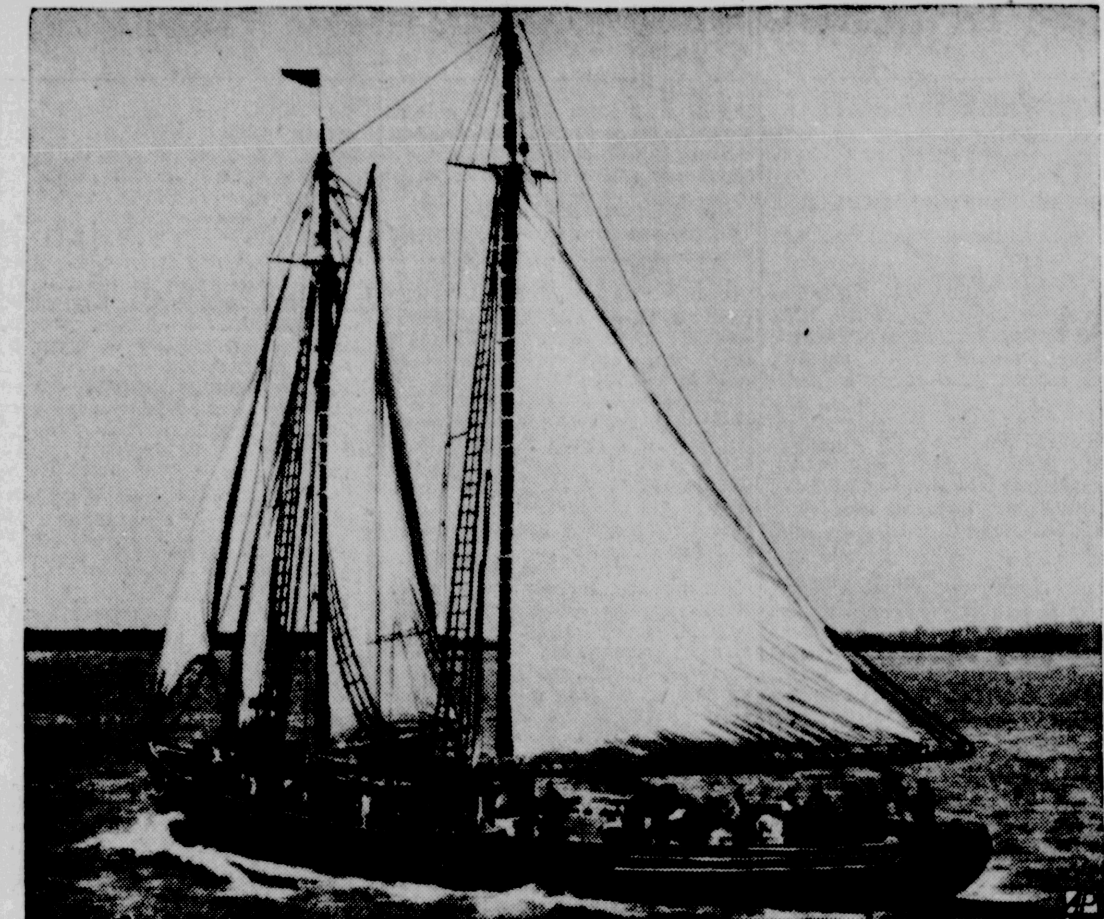

Prefect of Students, Mount St. Alphonsus, the Rev. P. McGowan.

Gray Fined $3

John Gray of Newburgh, arrested on a charge of public intoxication on Broadway early this morning, was fined $3 when arraigned later before Judge Cahill in police court.

Experts Say U. S. Faces Shortage of Plane Mechanics

Committee Reports 60,000 More Workers Needed to Supplement Those Now Working on Planes

Washington, May 13 (AP)—Government experts reported to President Roosevelt today that there would be a shortage of aircraft mechanics in time of war, and recommended that existing facilities for training skilled workers be "expanded to the limit of peace-time practicability."

A seven-man interdepartmental committee headed by Oswald Ryan of the civil aeronautics authority, reported that 60,000 additional workers to supplement the 40,000 now employed in the aviation industry would be needed to execute the current army and navy air corps expansion.

But this immediate problem could be solved without any extraordinary action on the part of the government and private industry, it said.

The trouble would arise, the committee added, if war came and made it necessary to expand the peace-time figures to six times, or from 100,000 to between 400,000 and 600,000 workers.

Four-Point Program

In anticipation of war-time needs and conditions, it proposed a four-point program to:

Establish immediately apprenticeship systems in all aircraft manufacturing plants and commercial air carriers' shops.

Encourage public vocational air trade schools to assist aircraft companies in training employed workers and apprentices.

Aid youths showing particular aptitude for mechanical trade in national youth administration work centers to obtain employment as apprentices in aircraft plants.

Continue to inculcate "desirable work habits" in civilian conservation corps enrollees, with the idea of making those showing aptitude for mechanics available for discharge to accept training in aviation.

Under the heading "demands of air expansion in war-time," the committee said:

"The greatly increased output of aircraft will make production line methods possible, thereby requiring the proportion of skilled workers. In spite of this, however, it seems clear that the demand would far outrun the available supply."

Pennsylvania Housewives Barricade Dusty Street

Bridgeville, Pa., May 13 (AP)—Irate housewives took time off from their spring cleaning and barricaded dusty Essen street until thorough officials agreed to oil the thoroughfare.

About ten women blocked traffic yesterday with bricks, railroad ties and household equipment. Street workers sent to tear down the barricade were told "if you try to take those bricks away you'll get them on the head."

"We live, breathe and eat dust," declared Mrs. Mary Bertolina. "We can't open our windows for a little fresh air because of it. We want the street oiled and we want it kept oiled."

Burgess Dr. C. E. McMillen said the matter would be attended to immediately.

Fishermen Find Legion to Hold Dinner for Love

State Troopers Identify Bodies of Philip Upton and C. W. Jones

Fishermen this morning recovered the bodies of Philip Upton, 20, of St. Joseph, Mich., and Carley W. Jones, 20, of Yonkers, missing Bard College students, from the Hudson river. The body of James S. Nash, 20, of Norwalk, Conn., was recovered by state police Thursday afternoon.

Identification of the two bodies taken from the river today was made by state police.

Search for the three college students, who have been missing from the college at Annandale-on-Hudson since April 12, has been carried on almost continuously since the sailboat in which it was believed they were in, was found washed ashore.

This will be Commander Love's official visit to Ulster county, and it is expected that a large number of the members of the American Legion and the Auxiliary will attend the banquet in his honor, and hear his annual message.

The dinner will be served at 7:30 o'clock, consisting of the following menu: Half grapefruit, hot (Continued on Page 12)

Fog Again Halts Royal Ship Bearing Party to Dominion

Aboard Empress of Australia, May 13—(Canadian Press).—Fog again halted the Empress of Australia today and it appeared the liner, carrying King George and Queen Elizabeth on their visit to Canada and the United States, would be a day late in reaching Quebec.

The Empress was fogbound in the ice zone 250 miles east of Cape Race, Newfoundland, and 1,080 miles from Quebec, where she was due to arrive at 9:30 a. m., E. S. T. Monday. It was not believed that she could dock before Tuesday.

At 6:15 a. m., E. S. T., today the liner and her escort drifted idly, with fog so thick those aboard the Empress could not see the cruisers Glasgow and Southampton nearby.

Ship's officers admitted that even if the fog lifted shortly it would be impossible to reach Quebec on schedule.

Dissenting Group Employs 45,000 Men and Refuses to Honor UMW at Coal Parley

Mines to Open

Other Members Sign and Some Mines Will Open on Monday

New York, May 13 (AP)—The union shop contract with the United Mine Workers of America (CIO) for which John L. Lewis fought through eight weeks of deadlock and growing national emergency, was approved today by 15 of the 21 bituminous coal associations in the Appalachian joint conference after six southern groups withdrew.

The approval of the contract wiped away the last trace of fear of coal shortage and will send back to work Monday 300,000 of the 345,000 miners employed in the Appalachian eight-state area.

John L. Lewis, CIO head and president of the United Mine Workers of America, said the miners were ready to sign "forthwith" the standard agreement adopted by the majority today with a number of independent companies within the six districts that withdrew from the conference.

He declared the United Mine Workers were aware that a "preponderant sentiment of tonnage in the six districts are in truth and in fact favorable to acceptance of the agreement."

Then the CIO head added a "word of warning."

"I wish to say to them that until they make up their minds, some public policy requires that they keep those mines closed. The mine workers must not be evicted from their homes. There must not be shooting of mine workers by coal operators or any other use of lethal weapons against them. That goes particularly for Harlan county (Ky.) and the other five states those mines."

Six Refuse to Sign

New York, May 13 (AP)—Six members of the southern group of bituminous operators withdrew today from the Appalachian conference rather than sign the new two-year contract with the United Mine Workers of America (CIO) which includes the union shop clause.

L. C. Gunter, spokesman for the southern operators, said the group first voted "no" to the proposal for the union shop clause and then withdrew. The six are the Big Sandy, Kentucky; the Hazard, Kentucky; the Kanawha, West Virginia; the Harlan, Kentucky; the Southern Appalachian of Tennessee; and Southwestern Virginia and the Virginia Coal Operators' Association.

All are in the so-called high volatile group.

Gunter said there are 45,000 men employed by the dissenting group, and that the mines produce about 35,000,000 tons a year.

Others Sign Contract

The other members of the conference signed the contract and the mines will be re-opened Monday.

Offered for signatures was a two-year wage and hour contract that contained two sentences demanded by Lewis as the price of peace. The union shop clause, the principle of the union shop for the multi-billion dollar industry that employs 460,000 men and recognition of the country's largest labor organization as the exclusive bargaining agent.

It was approved yesterday, with one exception, by the subcommittee of eight men who since March 28 have labored to give the union the protection it sought against incursions by the AFL, Progressive Miners Union or other labor organizations.

The exception was Lee C. Gunter, of Knoxville, Tenn., soft-voiced representative of the southern high volatile group of coal companies of Tennessee, Kentucky, Virginia, and southern West Virginia. He registered as "not voting."

These companies producing approximately 80,000,000 tons annually and employing 80,000 men maintained a united front against the union shop clause, principally, some spokesmen said, because of fears of encroachment on the rights of management. Other operators, principally in West Virginia, had indicated a similar attitude.

Closer Ties Sought

The British-French bloc sought closer ties today with its new ally, Turkey, as a Polish protest to the Danzig Senate sharpened the issue between Germany and Poland over the free city.

In London, following yesterday's announcement by Prime Minister Chamberlain that Turkey and Britain would aid each other in the event of "aggression leading to war in the Mediterranean area," political commentators predicted Turkey would gain important British trade and munitions loans.

The French government approved the British-Turkish accord and French leaders hinted that France expected to reach a similar agreement soon. Informed sources in Paris hailed the addition of Turkey to the British-French line-up as a sign that Soviet Russia also intends to join and as an attraction to Bulgaria and Yugoslavia.

A Danzig Senate order forbidding a memorial service last night for the Polish hero, Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, on grounds it might cause disorder brought a Polish protest and charge that the Danzig government could not "guarantee peace."

Would Send Troops

Polish newspapers declared Polish troops should be sent to Danzig to assure order there if the free city's Senate cannot accept responsibility for it.

In Vienna, Catholic Church authorities interpreted a Nazi order that personnel changes in the clergy must have party sanction as meaning Nazis would control appointments of new vicars, pastors and other church dignitaries. Informed sources expressed belief that Vienna church authorities would ask the Vatican's advice and that much depended on how stringently the new rule was applied.

White-haired and visibly aged after more than a year's imprisonment by Nazi secret police in Vienna, Baron Louis Rothschild arrived in Paris, freed, a friend said, on condition not "to discuss his imprisonment under any circumstances."

Sudden Japanese occupation of the Kulsang international settlement at Amoy, China, yesterday, was interpreted in authoritative quarters in Shanghai as a test of the reaction of foreign governments. A Japanese spokesman warned that similar action against the Shanghai international settlement "may be necessary."

Admiral Harry T. Yarnell, commander-in-chief of the United States Asiatic fleet, sent a destroyer to Amoy to investigate the situation there.

Admiral Bristol Dies in Capital At Naval Hospital

Once High Commissioner to Turkey Underwent Operation 3 Weeks Ago; Was 71

MARK L. BRISTOL

Washington, May 13 (AP)—Rear Admiral Mark L. Bristol, retired, former high commissioner of the United States to Turkey, died unexpectedly at Naval Hospital this morning. He was 71.

Admiral Bristol apparently had been recovering satisfactorily from an operation performed three weeks ago at Johns Hopkins Hospital, in Baltimore. Associates said his heart apparently "gave out."

His widow survives him.

As a fighting man and "quarter-deck diplomat," Rear Admiral Mark Lambert Bristol served his country abroad in the World War and the ten eventful years that followed.

His services as high commissioner of the United States to Turkey were so highly valued by the state department that Secretary Hughes called special attention to them in a letter to the secretary of the navy.

For eight years in eastern Mediterranean waters, from 1919 to 1927, he acted for both the navy and state departments, laying the foundation for America's subsequent harmonious relations with Turkey, a former enemy country.

Admiral Bristol was a member of the international armistice commission in Belgium in November, 1918, and was one of the American delegates to the Lausanne Conference in 1922-23.

Completing his task in Turkey in 1927, Admiral Bristol returned to Washington for special duty

A seven-man interdepartmental committee headed by Oswald Ryan of the civil aeronautics authority, reported that 60,000 additional workers to supplement the 40,000 now employed in the aviation industry would be needed to execute the current army and navy air corps expansion.

But this immediate problem could be solved without any extraordinary action on the part of the government and private industry, it said.

The trouble would arise, the committee added, if war came and made it necessary to expand the peace-time figures to six times, or from 100,000 to between 400,000 and 600,000 workers.

Four-Point Program

In anticipation of war-time needs and conditions, it proposed a four-point program for:

Establish immediately apprenticeship systems in all aircraft manufacturing plants and commercial air carriers' shops. Encourage public vocational air trade schools to assist aircraft companies in training employed workers and apprentices.

Aid youths showing particular aptitude for mechanical trades in national youth administration work centers to obtain employment as apprentices in aircraft plants.

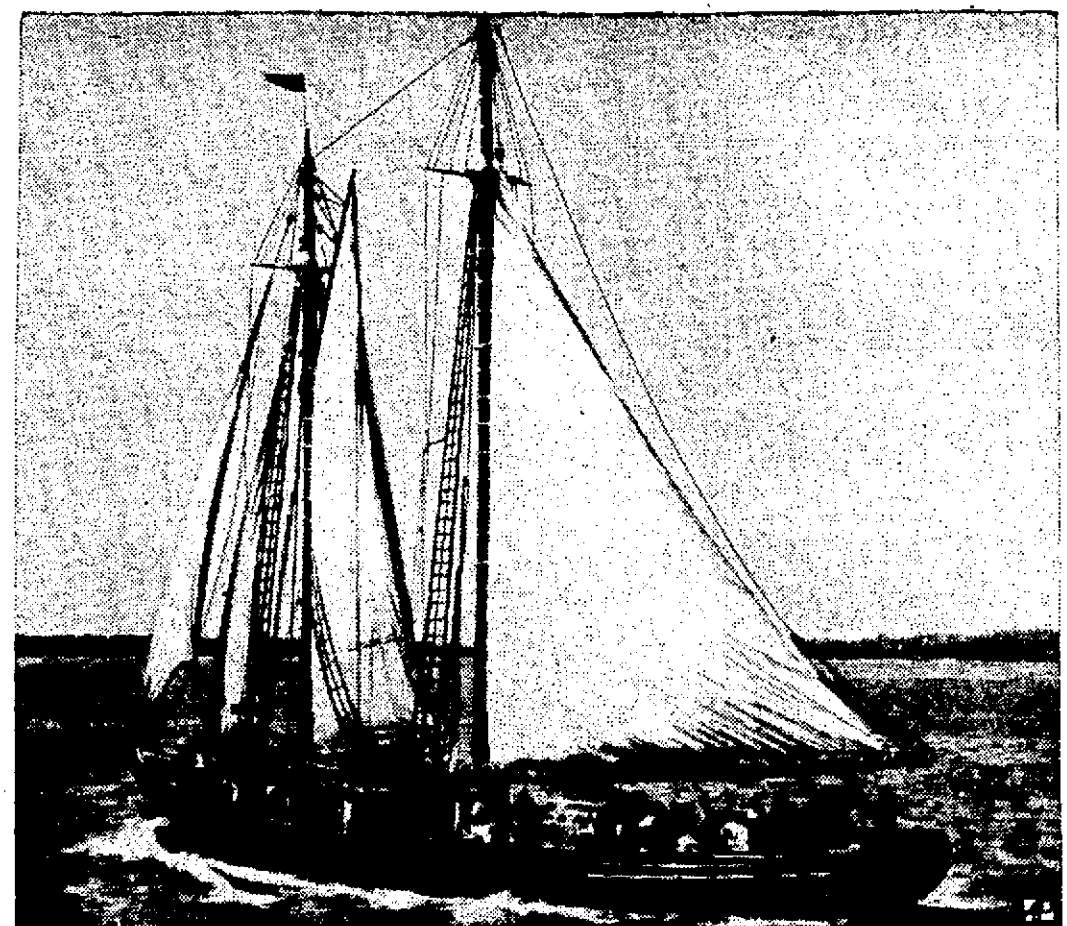

Continue to inculcate "desirable work habits" in civilian conservation corps enrollees, with the idea of making those showing aptitude for mechanics available for discharge to accept training in aviation.

Under the heading "demands of air expansion in war-time," the committee said:

The greatly increased output of aircraft will make production line methods possible, thereby reducing the proportion of skilled workers. In spite of this, however, it seems clear that the demand would far outrun the available supply.

One Dead, 47 Saved as Fishing Boats Sink

Although the fishing schooner Isabelle Parker (above) of Boston and the Gloucester schooner Edith C. Rose collided and went to the bottom of the Atlantic 100 miles off Yarmouth, N. S., only one casualty among the 48 men on board was reported. Thirty-three were picked up by coastal and fishing vessels after hours afloat in open dories; the remainder reached the coast unaided.

Experts Say U. S. Faces Shortage of Plane Mechanics

Committee Reports 60,000 More Workers Needed to Supplement Those Now Working on Planes

Washington, May 13 (AP)—Government experts reported to President Roosevelt today that there would be a shortage of aircraft mechanics in time of war, and recommended that existing facilities for training skilled workers be "expanded to the limit of peace-time practicability."

A seven-man interdepartmental committee headed by Oswald Ryan of the civil aeronautics authority, reported that 60,000 additional workers to supplement the 40,000 now employed in the aviation industry would be needed to execute the current army and navy air corps expansion.

But this immediate problem could be solved without any extraordinary action on the part of the government and private industry, it said.

Vote for Adolf

Elizabeth City, N. C., May 13 (AP)—The board of elections threw out one vote in the election for mayor because the recipient was not a resident. It was for Adolf Hitler of Germany.

Man With Hives

Cleveland, May 13 (AP)—Police are looking for a man with hives. He stole them, and the bees, too, from Joseph Selankko.

Pennsylvania Housewives Barricade Dusty Street

Bridgeville, Pa., May 13 (AP)—Irate housewives took time off from their spring cleaning and barricaded dusty Essen street until thorough officials agreed to oil the thoroughfare.

About ten women blocked traffic yesterday with bricks, railroad ties and household equipment. Street workers sent to tear down the barricade were told "if you try to take those bricks away you'll get them on the head."

"We live, breathe and eat dust," declared Mrs. Mary Bertolina. "We can't open our windows for a little fresh air because of it. We want the street oiled and we want it kept oiled."

Burgess Dr. C. E. McMillen said the matter would be attended to immediately.

Fishermen Find Students' Bodies

State Troopers Identify Bodies of Philip Upton and C. W. Jones

Fishermen this morning recovered the bodies of Philip Upton, 20, of St. Joseph, Mich., and Carlyle W. Jones, 20, of Yonkers, missing Bard College students, from the Hudson river. The body of James S. Nash, 20, of Norwalk, Conn., was recovered by state police Thursday afternoon.

Identification of the two bodies taken from the river today was made by state police.

Search for the three college students, who have been missing from the college at Annandale-on-Hudson since April 12, has been carried on almost continuously since the sailboat in which it was believed they were in, was found washed ashore.

Legion to Hold Dinner for Love

State Legion's Commander Will Be Entertained Here on May 21

State Commander Frank C. Love of Syracuse and members of his official staff, and the state officers of the auxiliary, will be entertained at a dinner in his honor at Huling's Barn by Ulster County Legionnaires and the Ladies' Auxiliaries, on Wednesday evening, May 24.

This will be Commander Love's official visit to Ulster county, and it is expected that a large number of the members of the American Legion and the Auxiliary will attend the banquet in his honor, and hear his annual message.

The dinner will be served at 7:30 o'clock, consisting of the following menu: Half grapefruit, hot

Fog Again Halts Royal Ship Bearing Party to Dominion

Aboard Empress of Australia, May 13—(Canadian Press).—Fog again halted the Empress of Australia today and it appeared the liner, carrying King George and Queen Elizabeth on their visit to Canada and the United States, would be a day late in reaching Quebec.

The Empress was fogbound in the iceberg zone 250 miles east of Cape Race, Newfoundland, and 1,080 miles from Quebec, where she was due to arrive at 9:30 a. m., E. S. T. Monday. It was not believed that she could dock before Tuesday.

At 6:15 a. m., E. S. T., today the liner and her escort drifted idly, with fog so thick those aboard the Empress could not see the cruisers Glasgow and Southampton nearby.

Ship's officers admitted that even if the fog lifted shortly it would be impossible to reach Quebec on schedule.

Fog has swirled about the gleaming white liner almost continuously since early Thursday and the vessel was able to proceed little more than 150 miles.

Yesterday she covered less than 60 miles and last night the Empress started and stopped frequently, her whistle continuously sounding fog signals.

The delay in reaching Quebec will disrupt a program prepared weeks in advance. The royal tour of Canada and part of the United States had been timed to the last minute.

Continuous contact was being maintained by radio with Canadian authorities regarding arrangements for the tour.

Ship officials were not worried when fog held the liner almost at a standstill Thursday, because she had sailed two days ahead of the original departure date so as to meet seasonal conditions, but another 24 hours of idle drifting changed the picture.

Dissenting Group Employed 45,000 Men and Refuses to Honor UMW at Coal Parley

Mines to Open

Other Members Sign and Some Mines Will Open on Monday

New York, May 13 (AP)—The union shop contract with the United Mine Workers of America (UMW) for which John L. Lewis fought through eight weeks of deadlock and growing national emergency, was approved today by 15 of the 21 bituminous coal associations in the Appalachian joint conference after six southern groups withdrew.

The approval of the contract wiped away the last trace of fear of coal shortage and will send back to work Monday 300,000 of the 345,000 miners employed in the Appalachian eight-state area.

John L. Lewis, UMW head and president of the United Mine Workers of America, said the miners were ready to sign "forthwith" the standard agreement adopted by the majority today with a number of independent companies within the six districts that withdrew from the conference.

He declared the United Mine Workers were aware that a "preponderant sentiment of tonnage in the six districts are in truth and in fact favorable to acceptance of the agreement."

Then the CIO head added a "word of warning."

"I wish to say to them that until they make up their minds, some public policy requires that they keep those mines closed. The mine workers must not be evicted from their homes. There must not be shooting of mine workers by coal operators or any other use of lethal weapons against them. That goes particularly for Harlan county (Ky.) and the other five districts. Soldiers will not operate those mines."

Six Refuse to Sign

New York, May 13 (AP)—Six members of the southern group of bituminous operators withdrew today from the Appalachian conference rather than sign the new two-year contract with the United Mine Workers of America (UMW) which includes the union shop clause.

L. C. Gunter, spokesman for the southern operators, said the group first voted "no" to the proposal for the union shop clause and then withdrew. The six are the Big Sandy, Kentucky; the Hazard, Kentucky; the Kanawha, West Virginia; the Harlan, Kentucky; the Southern Appalachian of Tennessee; and Southwestern Virginia and the Virginia Coal Operators' Association.

All are in the so-called high volatile group.

Gunter said there are 45,000 men employed by the dissenting group, and that the mines produce about 35,000,000 tons a year.

Others Sign Contract
The other members of the conference signed the contract and the mines will be re-opened Monday.

Offered for signatures was a two-year wage and hour contract that contained two sentences demanded by Lewis as the price of peace. They embodied the principle of the union shop for the multi-billion dollar industry that employs 460,000 men and recognition of the country's largest labor organization as the exclusive bargaining agent.

It was approved yesterday, with one exception, by the sub-committee of eight men who since March 28 have labored to give the union the protection it sought against incursions by the AFL Progressive Miners Union or other labor organizations.

The exception was Lee C. Gunter, of Knoxville, Tenn., soft-voiced representative of the southern high volatile group of coal companies of Tennessee, Kentucky, Virginia, and southern West Virginia. He registered as "not voting."

These companies producing approximately 80,000,000 tons annually and employing 80,000 men maintained a united front against the union shop clause, principally, some spokesmen said, because of fears of encroachment on the rights of management. Other operators, principally in West Virginia, had indicated a similar attitude.

Injured in a Fall

Leo Brutkowski of 221 Third avenue suffered a bad cut over his left eye in a fall near Academy Park about 3:30 o'clock Friday afternoon. He was taken to the Kingston Hospital for treatment by Officers Harry Martin and Fallon in one of the radio cars.

MOTHERS OF THE YEAR:

Since Last Mother's Day, A Year Ago Tomorrow, These Women Have Made News By Having Children

GERALDINE, pretty young queen of Albania, was in flight before Italian invaders only two days after her firstborn, Crown Prince Skander, arrived April 5. King Zog found refuge for his family in Greece and considered a trip to America.

FARIDA, 17-year-old queen of Egypt, became a mother last November 17. A $15,000 pink-and-blue layette awaited Baby Princess Farid. The child can't succeed to Farouk's throne, however; the title passes in the male line.

KIRAS' firstborn was named Wilhelm after great-grandfather, the former German Kaiser, in the custom of first line Hohenzollern heirs. Wilhelm arrived February 9 at Potsdam. Father is Prince Louis Ferdinand; mother is ex-Russian princess.

THE ROOSEVELTS increased by two—both boys—in the past twelve months. They were No. 8 and 9 of presidential grandchildren, and were born on opposite coasts. Left, the President's daughter, Mrs. John Boettiger, who was the Seattle publisher, whose son, John Roosevelt Boettiger, arrived on March 30. Right, the lad who carries the President's name, shown with his mother, the former Ethel du Pont. Franklin D., III, son of Franklin, Jr., was born July 19, 1938, at Philadelphia.

MRS. BADGETT gave Texas its second set of quadruplets—all girls—last February 1, and added a sixth set of quads to U. S. population. The 36-year-old Galveston mother already has been given college scholarships for her daughters.

NAGAKO, empress of Japan, gave birth to her seventh child on March 2 at Tokyo. She is 36. Emperor Hirohito picked out the name of Princess Noble Precious—rather long in Japanese, but that was shortened to "Suga."

EMMI, actress-wife of Field Marshal Goering—Hitler's hefty head man—became a mother on June 2, 1938. Arrival of the daughter, Edda, was announced in extra editions of newspapers. Herr Hitler was godfather at the christening.

Churches to Aid Sale for Blind

The Kingston Sale for the Blind which is being held at 5 Main street until Friday, May 26, will have the support of all the churches which will serve at different periods. This sale lasts for two weeks and will give all an opportunity of visiting and patronizing the work for the blind. The work of the Albany shops extends all through the Hudson Valley section. Help is gladly given to any blind worker regardless of the locality in which he lives. The only question asked is, "Are you blind and what help can we give you?"

Among articles which the blind make are brooms, mops, dusters, rugs, and baskets.

On Tuesday, May 16, the following committees will be in charge: 10 a. m. to 2 p. m., St. James Methodist, with Mrs. Arthur C. Quimby, chairman. Assisted by Mrs. Edward J. Fitzgerald, Mrs. E. A. Freer, Mrs. James A. Gutteridge, Mrs. Chris Longyear, Mrs. Frederick Snyder. 2 p. m. to 5:30 p. m., Lutheran Church of the Redeemer; Miss Julia E. Walter, chairman. Founder of WCTU Will Be Honored

Brigadier Agnes McKernan, who does work for women's prisons in 11 states, will be guest speaker at a memorial service honoring Frances E. Willard Sunday evening at 8 o'clock in the First Baptist Church. The service is sponsored by the Kingston Women's Christian Temperance Union and the Kingston Ministerial Association.

The speaker will touch upon the "Problems and Joys of Women's Prison Work." She spoke recently at St. James Church, and those who heard her report she is an interesting speaker well versed in the subject with which she has been so closely connected.

Concert Campaign To Close Tonight

Headquarters for the annual drive for members to the Co-operative Concert Association will close this evening at 5 o'clock. If anyone has not been approached by one of the workers of the campaign committee, he is urgently requested to bring in his membership to the office located at the Governor Clinton Hotel.

Members of the committee consist of Dr. Frederic Holcomb, president; Mrs. Allan Hanstein, general chairman and Mrs. Eloise Lovatt, secretary. Nearly 100 workers have been engaged this week on the project which has met with much enthusiasm and success. The annual drive opened on Monday evening. Four concerts will be included in this series in Kingston opening in early November. The season will end with the appearance of Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson, in a two-piano recital. These British artists are considered "the best loved duetists in the world." Bartlett and Robertson play over 100 concerts every year, both in United States and in Europe. This coming season they are adding to the past honors a long tour through Australia and South Africa. Not only have they discovered a vast and interesting literature for two pianos, but composers have not been slow to realize that a new field for composition has been opened, and many new works have been written recently for them.

Napoleon Arch in Paris Attracts Many Tourists

Napoleon's triumphal arch, the imposing edifice at the head of the Champs Elysees which is better known to tourists than any other Paris monument, has celebrated its 100th anniversary. Strictly speaking, the Arc de Triomphe which overlooks Paris' "Great White Way" is not Napoleon's for he only started the construction. It was completed under the reign of King Louis Philippe at a cost of 45,225,575 francs or approximately $3,200,000. The Arc is 160 feet high, with an actual arch space of 94 feet; it is 146 feet wide and 7 1/2 feet thick. There are 273 steps to the summit which are seldom used now as the Arc was equipped with an elevator five years ago. Back in 1888, when there was no elevator, a postman named Francois Siry made a record climb, ascending three steps at a time in 91 seconds. He was faster than the modern elevator which makes the ascent in three minutes.

GARDEN PARTIES are a dime a dozen for British monarchs. Here they are at a fete given for them in Paris last July by President Lebrun. They will be feted at another in Washington.

No Fruit Blight Feared at Present, Farm Bureau Says

Temperatures Will Have to Fall Below Freezing to Kill Buds; Cool Spell Beneficial

Temperatures close to the freezing point has caused some concern among the fruit growers during the last two days, but at the Ulster County Farm Bureau office this morning it was stated that there had been no apparent damage to fruit trees, now in full bud. Apple trees have been in blossom for several days and many other varieties of fruit are in blossom but no damage is anticipated unless the temperature goes below the freezing point.

A freezing temperature while apples are in blossom may kill the buds and in case of peaches the blossoms are still more likely to be injured by low temperatures. The past several days of warm weather has been excellent weather for the pollenization of blossoms and the present cool snap will hold blossoms for a time, giving ample time for the working of bees in orchards.

Weather forecasts are for higher temperatures by Sunday.

Special Advertising

Washington, May 13 (P).—The public relations department of the federal home loan bank board reported today that more savings, building and loan associations had set aside special newspaper advertising and business promotion funds this year than ever before. One factor accounting for this development, the department reported, was the increased business obtained through such expenditures in 1938.

Putnam Says He Was Kidnaped

life were received April 20 and 23, police records showed. April 12, he fired two shots at an intruder, he reported.

On April 20, he turned over to the district attorney's office an anonymous letter which read in part: "If you have any regard for your future safety, stop publication of this book at once. The arm of Greater Germany reaches far and we have no desire to continue warning you. If you are wise you will do what we tell you and your future may be extinguished."

Three days later, a copy of the book, punctured with eight holes, and a crudely-pasted note were sent to his home.

Note Calls Him Criminal

The note, composed of letters cut from newspapers and magazines, read:

"Mr. Putnam you're a criminal. You failed to read future. Bullet wound would be fatal to you if you don't abandon the book, 'The Man Who Killed Hitler'."

"Take no chances of a bloody killing if you want to live. Your opportunity awaits you. Take it or leave it."

"Germany defies the world. 'Los Angeles Nazis hell'."

"The intruder at his home was believed at the time to be a burglar."

Putnam told Valley police that Monday and Tuesday, his male and female coat mounds—long-tailed miniature members of the raccoon family—awoke him the night of April 12 with their chattering. Looking outside, he saw a figure clambering up a tree outside his home.

The man jumped 15 feet to the ground and fled, dodging revolver bullets.

Moves Business

Putnam moved his publishing business to Hollywood last fall, after a three-month tour of the tropics.

For months after his wife, the world's premier woman aviator, disappeared July 2, 1937, between British New Guinea and Howland Island in the South Pacific, he refused to abandon hope that she had survived.

Last December, however, he filed her will for probate in Superior Court and on January 5 she was declared legally dead by Probate Judge Elliott Craig.

Putnam at that time presented affidavits from naval officers and department of interior officials who led the search for Miss Earhart. Judge Craig waived the usual requirement of seven years' absence before a missing person is declared dead, holding the evidence submitted by Putnam sufficient.

The publisher announced early this month that he planned to marry Mrs. Jean-Marie Consigny James of Beverly Hills next month. Mrs. James' divorce from William Robert James, son of U. S. District Judge William J. James, becomes final May 18.

Howard Cure Returns To Home of Parents

Missing from Alabama University since March 8, Howard Cure, 18-year-old son of U. S. Grant Cure of Pine Hill, has returned home. The lad left the Alabama institution and sought work through the south and claims that since he disappeared he had hitchhiked home after traveling through various southern states including Texas, Mississippi and other of the southern states in search of work.

An alarm for the lad had been broadcast through the east and south but his whereabouts were not known until he notified his parents several days ago that he was in New Jersey and enroute home.

Cure left school because of worry over studies and also because of pranks which fellow students played on him in college hazing.

Our Growing Population

The following births have been reported to the Board of Health: Mr. and Mrs. Harold G. Wolf of 23 Ulster street, a daughter, Marian Lucille, in Benedictine Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman L. Carl of Lake Hill, a son, Herman Roman, in Kingston Hospital.

Schirick Grants Citizens' Papers To 59 Applicants

Fifty-nine foreign born residents of Ulster county were granted citizenship Friday by Justice Harry E. Schirick in a regular term of naturalization court. Only one of 65 applicants was denied citizenship. Emil Ganse, Woodstock, artist. Five had their cases continued.

Examined previously by the examiner from the Labor Department, the citizens were given their final inquiry Friday before the court who later instructed them as to their duties and spoke of the privileges which were those of a citizen of this country. After being sworn in by County Clerk James A. Simpson the newly made citizens were presented with a small American flag and a copy of the Constitution of the United States by members of the Daughters of the American Revolution, a ceremony which is held at each naturalization term.

MOTHERS OF THE YEAR:

Since Last Mother's Day, A Year Ago Tomorrow, These Women Have Made News By Having Children

GERALDINE, pretty young queen of Albania, was in flight before Italian invaders only two days after her firstborn, Crown Prince Skander, arrived April 5. King Zog found refuge for his family in Greece and considered a trip to America.

FARIDA, 17-year-old queen of Egypt, became a mother last November 17. A $15,000 pink-and-blue layette awaited Baby Prince Ferial. The child can't succeed to Farouk's throne, however, the title passes in the male line.

KIRA'S firstborn was named Wilhelm — after great-grandpa, the former German kaiser, in the custom of first line Hohenzollern heirs. Wilhelm arrived February 9 at Potsdam. Father is Prince Louis Ferdinand; mother is ex-Russian princess.

THE ROOSEVELTS increased by two—both boys—in the past twelve months. They were Nos. 8 and 9 of Presidential grandchildren, and were born on opposite coasts. Left, the President's daughter, Mrs. John Bootlegger, wife of the Seattle publisher, whose son, John Roosevelt Bootlegger, arrived on March 30. Right, the lad who carries the President's name, shown with his mother, the former Ethel du Pont, Franklin D. III, son of Franklin, Jr., was born July 19, 1938, at Philadelphia.

MRS. BADGETT gave Texas its second set of quadruplets—all girls—last February 1, and added a sixth set of quads to U. S. population. The 36-year-old Galveston mother already has been given college scholarships for her daughters.

NAGAKO, empress of Japan, gave birth to her seventh child on March 2 at Tokyo. She is 36. Emperor Hirohito picked out the name of Princess Noble Precious — rather long in Japanese, but that was shortened to "Suga."

EMMI, actress-wife of Field Marshal Goering—Hitler's hefty head man—became a mother on June 2, 1938. Arrival of the daughter, Edda, was announced in extra editions of newspapers. Herr Hitler was godfather at the christening.

The speaker will touch upon the "Problems and Joys of Women's Prison Work." She spoke recently at St. James Church, and those who heard her report she is an interesting speaker well versed in the subject with which she has been so closely connected.

Concert Campaign To Close Tonight

Headquarters for the annual drive for members to the Co-operative Concert Association will close this evening at 5 o'clock. If anyone has not been approached by one of the workers of the campaign committee, he is urgently requested to bring in his membership to the office located at the Governor Clinton Hotel.

Members of the committee consist of Dr. Frederic Holcomb, president; Mrs. Allan Hanstein, general chairman and Mrs. Eloise Lovatt, secretary. Nearly 100 workers have been engaged this week on the project which has met with much enthusiasm and success. The annual drive opened on Monday evening.

Four concerts will be included in this series in Kingston opening in early November. The season will end with the appearance of Ethel Bartlett and Rae Robertson, in a two-piano recital. These British artists are considered "the best loved duetists in the world."

Bartlett and Robertson play over 100 concerts every year, both in United States and in Europe. This coming season they are adding to the past honors, a long tour through Australia and South Africa. Not only have they discovered a vast and interesting literature for two pianos, but composers have not been slow to realize that a new field for composition has been opened, and many new works have been written recently for them.

KINGSTON, NEW YORK, MAY 13, 1939.

THE GREAT CHARTER

There is much interest shown by Americans in the copy of "Magna Carta," the famous charter of liberties granted by King John at Runnymede in 1215, now shown at the New York Fair. And there would be more interest if people could read it. That document is the foundation not only of modern English law but of American law.

But there has been a good deal of hocus-pocus and misunderstanding about it. As the National Encyclopedia remarks, contrary to general belief, it "did not guarantee trial by jury." It was not designed primarily to protect popular rights; it was wrested from the King by the nobles or barons to protect their special rights. The "freemen" referred to were the feudal landholders. Rights were expected to trickle down from them benevolently to the people under them. It took centuries for the common people of England to gain the constitutional rights and privileges which our American colonists, in the time of the Revolution, had come to expect as a matter of course.

Even so, it represented great progress for the 13th century, and it would be great if the people in Germany, Italy, Russia and various other modern "authoritarian" countries could catch up with it.

EQUALITY IN THE CORRIDOR

A special convention drawn in 1921 supposedly regulated the problem of railroad communications between Germany and East Prussia through Pomerze, the Polish Corridor. That agreement placed five railroad lines at Germany's disposal. Only two are used by Germany today, and only one of the two carries heavy traffic.

That line, however, carried 1,500,000 passengers and 4,500,000 tons of freight in 1938, on German trains. Germans using the lines are free from passport regulations, currency control and customs inspection. Fares are the same as those charged within Germany. Passengers pay the Reich railroads in Reich currency. The railroads settle accounts with the Polish railroads at stated periods. During the last three years, because of German exchange difficulties, half of the payments have been accepted in kind by Poland.

There is an arbitration court which has met only three times since 1921. It was set up to take care of any disputes or injustices by fair and legal means.

All this suggests that Hitler's claim to be righting wrongs formerly done to Germany have little justification.

AGE AND OFFICE JOBS

"Are business men men or Romeos?" asks a young woman after trying vainly to get a job. "They want experience, some college training, ability to take rapid dictation and transcribe accurately. But the stenographer must be not a day over 27, and if she is in her thirties she doesn't get an interview."

"Employment agencies are very reluctant to take your application if you are past 30. There are two agencies in the city where I live that won't take them at all. And they are frank to tell you why."

One such agency obtained a place for the writer at $140 a month, she says, when she was 26. She gave up her job to marry, and before long her husband died. Now, in her "late thirties," presumably as competent as ever, and with more knowledge and stability than she used to have, she cannot even get a hearing.

So many such cases come to attention that this matter of working women's age and of current business and professional standards seems a very serious matter. It looks as if some classes besides what are often termed the "submerged" groups are not getting a square deal, particularly in the larger cities.

SENSELESS AUTOGRAPHS

Paul Whiteman sets fellow celebrities a good example. He doesn't like autograph-hounds and he won't sign their proffered dotted lines, albums or program margins. Whiteman has been known as the King of Jazz and Dean of Modern Music and has been a popular band and orchestra leader for a good many years now. He holds his admiring public in spite of curt rebuffs to signature-seekers.

Boundless good nature, or fear of offending

"their public," has held too many other stars in one field or another at the mercy of merciless autograph-collectors. They are too easy-going and are encouraging something which needs to be discouraged. The autographs collected by the average "fan" these days have no real interest to collectors. When hundreds of such signatures exist for any celebrity they become a drug on the market.

Other pestered creatures might take heart and learn to say no to the next autograph nuisances who come their way.

This royal visit begins to seem very folksy. When the King and the President settle down at Hyde Park for a good talk, how long will it be until they're calling each other George and Frank? And will it be "My Dear" with Eleanor and Elizabeth?

This should be a lesson to window-washers: A young man in New York got badly hurt by walking through a plate glass window which was so clean that he could not see it.

A weather addict complains that the mean temperature this spring has been meaner than usual.

While other nations are all getting ready to fight each other, we lucky dogs only have to fight among ourselves.

Illinois is growing amazingly modern; its legislature has voted to let women serve on juries.

Europe now is experimenting with a lot of ideas "noble in purpose" but cockeyed in practice.

The main trouble with public relief is that it tends to become a vested interest.

Blessed are the peacemakers, but they certainly do get kicked around.

This is the land of quantity production, in politics and oratory as in other things.

LARGE MEALS MAY CAUSE ANGINA

A professor of medicine died a few months ago at the age of 80. When he was about 45 years of age he discovered that he had heart disease and would have to live a careful life if he was to live at all. Comparing himself to a bridge that had been able to carry 10 ton but could now carry only 5 ton, he endeavored to do his work at half his usual speed. The result was that he saved or prolonged his life by over 35 years.

Now, doing your work at half speed does not refer to physical work alone but to all the daily body processes and particularly to the eating and digesting of food.

Dr. G. Werley, El Paso, Texas, in Southwestern Medicine in discussing angina, a pain under the breast bone, and hardening of the blood vessels carrying blood from the heart to all parts of the body and to the heart muscle itself, says that many cases are due to allergy—being sensitive to various substances—and, in some cases, this sensitiveness combined with nervousness. However, these attacks of angina may be a blessing in disguise in that they call attention to what would be a dangerous or fatal condition if the individual were to be careless about his daily life habits.

"The presence of angina is a signal of danger that if heeded and followed by correction, especially of bad eating habits, may actually prolong life and thus be advantageous."

I have spoken before of the man past seventy, all of whose brothers had died in their early fifties. When asked why he was so fortunate as to be alive at his advanced age, he replied, "Well, I always had a poor appetite."

Dr. Werley tells us that the chief cause of angina can be traced to what has gone down the gullet (throat). Another warning is that overweight generally comes from eating too much and especially too much fat, along with which always goes cholesterol (a fatty substance found in fat)—the one important cause of hardening of the walls of the blood vessels.

The thought then is that overeating puts extra work on the heart, just as does physical work, therefore, small meals may prevent these attacks of angina.

Rudy explained: "These consisted of combinations like 66-777, or those ending in double-0 and triple-0. Such numbers were picked out of the lots as shipments came in. Rudy said it would have taken too much work to fish out a plain number like 21-794.

Tribute in Court to V. B. Van Wageningen And A. C. Connelly

Tribute to two of the oldest members of the Ulster County Bar Association was paid Monday in Supreme Court when resolutions in memory of Arthur C. Connelly and Virgil B. Van Wageningen were presented and made a part of the court record. Offered by committees appointed to draw up suitable resolutions in behalf of the Bar Association the resolution in memory of Mr. Connelly was presented by Assemblyman J. Edward Conway and Judge George F. Kaufman presented the resolution on the passing of Mr. Van Wageningen.

Following the offering of the resolutions members of the Bar Association spoke briefly including former County Judge Joseph M. Fowler, a member of the law firm of Fowler & Connelly, who commented briefly upon the outstanding lives of both of the deceased members. Justice Sydney F. Foster, presiding justice, spoke briefly in directing the resolutions spread upon the minutes of the court.

Both members of the bar for many years and outstanding attorneys of the county, the following resolutions on the death of Mr. Connelly and Mr. Van Wageningen were made part of the court record:

To the Supreme Court:

In 1890, Arthur C. Connelly was admitted to the Bar of this state. He commenced his scholastic preparation in the Old Kingston Academy and continued his academic training at Syracuse University from which he earned the degree of A. B. and A. M. He further pursued his studies at the Columbia from which university he was graduated with the degree of LL.B. His early professional association was with the then well known offices of Bernard and Fiero, later Bernard and Van Wageningen and with the Hon. John J. Linson. Thereafter he practiced his profession from a personal office in what is now the Leventhal Building until 1925 when was formed the partnership of Fowler & Connelly at 293 Wall street, which existed at the time of his death, February 3, 1939.

In the nearly fifty years of active practice there was included in his career about ten years service as Clerk of the Surrogate's Court, a term as Corporation Counsel of the City of Kingston and upwards of ten years as United States Commissioner, all of which activities accentuating his professional abilities in those particular fields of the law.

No man can practice a profession for a life time, especially in a rural county, without establishing a rating in the minds of his brethren who have acquired an accurate knowledge of the man and the lawyer and in Mr. Connelly's case such rating is one of which his family and friends may well be proud. We of the Bench and Bar will remember him as a lawyer of unusual professional ability and honesty but who also insisted upon honesty on the part of his clients in their relations with others. His word of mouth agreements were everywhere accepted as readily as written stipulations.

Seldom did the plaudits of the crowd ring in his ears for he sought not the praise and commendation of his fellow men, but only that he might do his plain duty day by day as he saw it. Thus he earned the respect and admiration of all who knew him.

We, who here sorrowfully note his passing, know that the Ulster County Bar has lost a stalwart member from its ranks and now find a gap not easily to be filled. In his extra-professional activities, we think of him as a man largely responsible for the development of the Kingston Co-operative Savings and Loan Association, active in social and public services and deeply interested in fraternal activities.

All this and more which is indelible in the memories of today's Bench and Bar, but in order that those who follow us may have a record of our appraisal of and affectionate regard for, Arthur C. Connelly, we, a committee of the Ulster County Bar Association, do:

Move that the clerk of this court enter upon its records the foregoing statement and transmit a copy thereof to Mrs. Connelly, and to their son, William H. Connelly.

J. Edward Conway,
Christopher K. Loughran,
Joseph M. Fowler.

Resolution of Ulster County Bar Association on the Death of Virgil B. Van Wageningen

By the death of Virgil B. Van Wageningen on November 6, 1938, the Bar of Ulster County suffered the loss of a member whose value and standing were pre-eminent not only in its membership as then constituted but among its all-time great. In fact, it is not in any sense an exaggeration to say that in the entire history of this County no citizen of any profession or calling ever more fully attained or justly deserved the trust, confidence and respect of its people than Virgil B. Van Wageningen.

The position which Mr. Van Wageningen so long held at this Bar and in the esteem of the populace of this County was so unusual as to be almost unique. He was not a trial lawyer. He seldom appeared in Court in contested litigation. He avoided public office. So far as possible he avoided publicity of every kind. He lived quietly and modestly. He conducted his business largely in the privacy of his own office and devoted himself principally to the affairs of the banking institutions for which he was attorney, to real property transactions and to the settlement of estates. And yet in this quiet, unobtrusive way he not only acquired and retained the largest legal practices in this county, but the respect, esteem and trust of its people to an almost unprecedented extent.

To those who were intimately acquainted with Mr. Van Wageningen there was nothing paradoxical about his success or about the manner in which he was held by the public. Some attempt to explain it by saying that he was "a character." What they really should say is that "he had character."

In truth Virgil B. Van Wageningen had as much genuinely fine character as any person this county ever knew.

Mr. Van Wageningen was essentially a lawyer of the old school. In personality he was plain, modest, unassuming. He was utterly devoid of sham, pretense or affectation. Other and lesser men might seek the limelight. He would have none of it. Other and lesser men might arrogate to themselves the title of "Senator," "Judge" or the like. He preferred to smilingly respond to the simple appellation of "squire" which his legal and business intimates affectionately bestowed upon him. Other and lesser men might parade themselves before the public eye. He chose instead to live simply and quietly in his house by the side of the road and to be a friend to man.

There were so many fine traits and qualities in the make-up of Mr. Van Wageningen and they were so closely related and blended together that it is difficult to choose the predominant one. Perhaps his most pronounced characteristics were sincerity and honesty. Constituted as he was, we doubt that he could have been otherwise than sincere and honest.

Anything else would have been wholly foreign to his nature. He used to say that "it is as easy for a man to be honest as it is for him to breathe," and of himself that observation seemed to be wholly true. Certainly he practised what he preached, and despite the fact that he was engaged in a business which held forth as natural incidents repeated opportunities for chicanery, insincerity and dishonesty, his name became to the people of this County a household word for honesty and integrity. His brother lawyers and business associates often said that he never cheated but one man in his life and that that man was Virgil B. Van Wageningen. What they meant by that statement was that he was so utterly fair and honest and upright towards others that he was sometimes unfair to himself.

Another outstanding trait of Mr. Van Wageningen was that he was intensely human and humane. He lived the life and talked the language of the common man. He understood human beings and had sympathy for their troubles and weaknesses. To the honest but unfortunate and even to the weak and unwise he constantly extended a helping hand, without reward or hope of reward, and often at a sacrifice of profitable business. Like that disciple Tabitha, which by interpretation is called Dorcas, he was known and shall be remembered by the alms-deeds and good works which he did.

Even in connection with the legal work for which he was paid, Mr. Van Wageningen consistently displayed a trait which in these days is unusual. Despite the fact that he was unquestionably one of the most competent and experienced attorneys of this county and that his services reasonably and justly commanded compensation commensurate to his ability and experience, he was consistently modest in his charges. He preferred to derive his income from moderate charges on a great volume of work rather than by higher charges on a smaller volume. The records of the Surrogate's Court of this county actually disclose that in some instances his clients complained, not because they considered themselves overcharged but undercharged. While his income from his practice was concededly large, he was compelled to work early and late to make it so. During his long career he doubtless worked as hard as any attorney in the history of this county.

It was fortunate for him and for his clients that he had an almost limitless capacity for hard work.

The one part of the legal business in which Mr. Van Wageningen excelled above all others was in his ability to compromise and adjust disputes and differences. Probably no lawyer in the history of this county ever avoided more litigation than did Mr. Van Wageningen. He had an uncanny sense of justice and a knack of cutting straight to the heart of a legal dispute, coupled with an extraordinary ability to induce prospective litigants to fairly and justly compose their differences. In such situations he gave almost no heed to legal technicalities. His cardinal principle was the simple rule of right and wrong. He was as fair to the party whom he did not represent as to his own client. He was often blunt in expressing his opinions but was so wholly sincere and honest in his convictions and so logical and persuasive that, except in rare instances, he succeeded in composing even the most violent disputes and differences. The total amount of money which he saved to his clients and to their adversaries as well and the good-will and family harmonies he preserved in such situations are utterly incalculable.

Virgil B. Van Wageningen was far more than a good lawyer and a good man. He was a thoroughly good citizen. To the people of this county he was an honest, conscientious and wholly reliable counsellor, guide and friend. His life was one of distinguished and unselfish service. Upon the stone which marks his resting-place may well be placed the epitaph "Well done good and faithful servant."

Therefore, be it Resolved, that

Some Sort of Tax Revision Bill Seems Certain at This Session of Congress

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, May 13—Some sort of tax revision bill seems certain to be presented to congress at this session. Sentiment for it in both houses is substantial. The attitude of the administration toward the proposed legislation is uncertain, but it is not correct to say this attitude is hostile.

The President's position in a nutshell is that, for every tax repealed, there ought to be another which would yield the same amount of revenue. He places the burden of working out such a scheme on congress, where, of course, it belongs. Those persons who think Mr. Roosevelt is failing to cooperate with business when he declines to assert himself aggressively on behalf of tax revision are entirely overlooking the fact that this is a spending congress. Judging by the size of the new farm bill just passed by overwhelming vote in the Senate, every member who ever made a speech in favor of a balanced budget or economy and yet voted for the new farm bill owes a letter of apology to President Roosevelt and Governor Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board. Certainly there is no encouragement in this action for Mr. Roosevelt now to offer a program of tax reduction which will further reduce governmental revenues.

The whole situation as between the opposition to the administration and the President is getting more and more clouded. On the one hand, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States adopts resolutions which administration spokesmen and high officials regard as an attempt to scrap the whole New Deal program without regard to objectives, and, on the other hand, business critics are insisting that the administration ought to be making more overtures to business. Reconciliation of opposing views and the working out of a program have not been made easier by the events of the last few days.

The tax program, to be sure, had its origin in congressional insistence that something be done at this session to remove the "deterrents" to business. Much discussion of that word has left doubts as to what is meant. In the view of Undersecretary Hanes at the treasury and others, the word has reference to clauses in the present tax laws which, for instance, do not bring in any revenue at all, but which deter business reorganizations and changes in debt structure. All sorts of inequities are present in the law which prevent the treasury from reaping as much revenue as it should. There are other things, called "deterrents," which are in the nature of "incentives," and these lie in the conjectural realm as to what revenue might be brought in.

Certainly, so far as the administration is concerned, it has to be persuaded that business will be improved if all the proposed changes in the tax laws are made. Likewise, it would doubtless like to know how much further toward increasing the deficit and the national debt congress proposes to go and how the legislators are going to raise the money to pay for their new spending follies.

The president has been cautious about the tax revision program from the start. The treasury has been enthusiastic and has been working hard trying to develop the right amendments. Mr. Roosevelt keeps his own counsel and his own strategy, but it would seem that he really wants something done about the tax laws, especially cumbersome and unworkable provisions, and that he is willing to go along on some rate changes, but that, if congress keeps on increasing the deficit and if business keeps on trying to sabotage his program in congress, he may not bestir himself on the tax program. There is no evidence of this trend as yet, but it is an explanation of recent happenings which is plausible in view of the way political currents move in the national capital.

The analysis would appear to be all the more reasonable because the actual amount of money involved in the proposed tax changes is relatively a small sum compared to the size of the whole deficit, and there is much to be said for the argument that, if business is given the proper incentives, the treasury may find itself with expanding tax receipts and a genuine recovery movement under way.

The strategy of the President in his relations with Congress is not always visible to the naked eye, but in this instance it would seem that either public sentiment for tax revision is not as strong as it is cracked up to be, and hence Mr. Roosevelt can afford to be lukewarm about it, or else that the President prefers to let Congress have the ball this session and take full responsibility. This latter way used to be the method of enacting tax laws, and the strange thing is that the senators and representatives do not yet realize that it is their function to write the laws and to get from the executive departments various suggestions, recommendations and data, and not instructions as to how to legislate.

Eight-Foot Banks of Snow

A card from Mr. and Mrs. George H. Brooks, dated Tacoma, Washington, May 7, stated that they had reached there on that date, having covered considerably more than 9000 miles so far. Mr. Brooks writes, "We had to plough through eight-foot banks of snow to get to the inn for dinner. Saw a Rocky Mountain goat two feet from our car, and plenty of deer."

Old and battered card tables may often be salvaged with a coat of gray paint, and, if necessary, a new top of thin painted wood.

The Ulster County Bar Association present this memorial to Virgil B. Van Wageningen to the Supreme Court of the State of New York at a term thereof to be held in and for the County of Ulster and request that it be entered in full in the record of the Court and that a copy thereof be transmitted by the Clerk to the family of Mr. Van Wageningen.

Ancient Arsenal Will Feature Play

A veritable arsenal of ancient weapons of all descriptions—some of them museum pieces—will be among the properties used in "Silas, the Choreboy," the first melodrama to be presented by the Town Players at Town Music Hall, Port Ewen, beginning May 25.

Perhaps the rarest of them all is an old, cap-fired fowling piece, made in Albany more than a century ago. Discovered forgotten in a Greene county curio shop, this gun boasts a stock made from one piece of curly and birds-eye maple. On one side of the stock is a carved cheek rest and on the other is a brass bound compartment for the storage of caps.

Original Remington and Colt pistols of early vintage are other guns which will be used by the players. The Remington is equipped with a sort of lever arrangement connected with a small ramrod for stuffing powder and balls into a revolving cylinder. It was made in 1858.

Most unusual of all is a small derringer on which the entire barrel revolves, instead of the cartridge cylinder alone. The gun, about 4 or 5 inches long, fires five shots, the barrel turning each time the trigger is pulled.

These and other death-dealing weapons of many years ago will arm the villains at Town Music Hall this summer.

"Magnetic Hill" Springhill, N. S., (AP)—A "magnetic hill" has been discovered near here. Because of the relation of the highway to the surrounding terrain, an automobile with brakes off seems to roll uphill of its own volition.

Flatlands Along Plank Road Yield Food for City Folk

Small Farm Group Cultivates a Large Vegetable Output

Rotation of Crops Grown in Concentrated Territory From Early Spring to Late Summer

Hot Beds Used

Plants Given Early Start Under Cover as Caution Against Frost

Vitamins which help sustain the pace of city folk get their start in such areas as the Kingston Flats where the work of nature and the labor of men are combining now to convert rich, brown soil into a pickled pattern of varying greens.

These nourishing foods, grown in long even rows in this concentrated region so close to Kingston, will soon be city-bound to sell like hot cakes on the market.

Vegetables from these farms along the Plank Road have long been of the finest quality and the soil is known as the most fertile in Ulster county's farming area. Each year the lands yield hundreds of tons of all types of edible plant life grown in this climate and within recent years the farmers have raised a large share of flowers and shrubbery.

Scallions on the March

This season has been generally considered a late one by the farmers, but already several types of vegetables such as lettuce, scallions and radishes have an encouraging start and soon large shares of the earlier crops will be ready for picking and shipment to the markets.

Most of the earlier vegetables get their start in hot beds during February. Later some of the plants are transplanted to other beds known as cold frames, all when the weather permits all plants in both types of beds are transplanted in the large open gardens.

The hot beds are heated generally by hot water systems although some of the farmers also use electricity. Old fashioned hot beds were heated by manure, but few of the farmers in this modern age revert to this older system.

Rolls of straw are spread over the window frames of the hot beds and cold frames during the cooler spring evenings to prevent damage to the crops by frost but in the daytime they are always left exposed to the growth-producing sunlight.

Other seed planted directly on the farm and during the earlier season, are protected by small round waxed paper caps and these are left on until the spring shows no signs of producing a belated frost. Such precautions are generally taken with pumpkins and melon seed, and others which require sustained protection against chilling weather.

Like Miniature Camps

Long rows of these white caps which often take up substantial share of the acreage, and resemble miniature encampments, present a rhythmic picture from the highway and they are in marked contrast to the rows of green things which are popping through the soil at this time.

Most of the vegetables which get their start in the hot beds and cold frames are transplanted during this month, although some, less susceptible to moderately cold weather, sometimes are put in the major growing areas late in April.

Lettuce and a few of the earlier vegetables, which have been taken from the glass-covered beds, have begun to show prodigious growth and soon will be ready for the markets. Some of the later vegetables such as cabbage, which have been transplanted, also are well advanced at this time.

Contrasted to the lettuce and other early crops, which have been transplanted, are long rows of the earlier vegetables planted recently directly in the main gardens. Some of these at this time are scarcely an inch above the soil and will be picked several weeks later than the crops taken from the beds.

Cultivation of the lands along the flats begins each year at the first definite signs of spring and many of the fields are plowed while snow still lingers on the mountainsides and in the shaded ravines.

Rotation of Crops

After the plowing, a rotation of crops is started in the fields and then begins the time-taking task

Tillers of the Soil Aid Nature in Providing Vitamins

The miracle of life, which gives men food is helped along by such farmers as those, who work in the fields each year along the Plank Road to produce vegetables of fine quality. Tons of edible plant life is produced each year on all of the several farms within a mile of Kingston and their successful growth is dependent upon the elements and the skilled guidance of experienced farmers. Shown above are typical spring scenes at the various truck gardens. At the top left is a view of a horse-drawn harrow which keeps the soil loose and piled near the rows of young vegetables. To the right is a similar job being done by tractor and in the inset, one of the farmers is shown in the act of planting. At center left is a view of the John Walker farm, one of the largest and oldest in the area. The view at right, center is of one of the farms which extends over the Esopus creek. The vegetables at this early stage are scarcely visible above the soil, but in the background can be seen rows of the hot caps which are put over some of the earlier crops to protect them against possible belated frosts. At the bottom left is a view of the typical hot beds and cold frames used on the farms and at the right of literally nursing their growth. Harrowing and hoeing is carried on at regular intervals and the crops require varying attention until they are ready for picking and shipment to the market.

The horse is still used by some of the farmers, but the tractor has come into more common use for general farm needs. Horses which are used for harrowing are trained to walk between the narrow rows of vegetables and they keep directly on their course, like an acrobat on a tight rope.

Tractors must be driven with similar care to prevent injury to the crops which are particularly delicate at the outset, and inasmuch as the tractor is generally used to save time on the job, their drivers must be as cautious as the trained horse.

Weeding of the crops begins soon after they extend a few inches out of the ground and then all hands on the farms are needed to aid the vegetables in their fight for life. Crews of young men are frequently hired to aid in the weeding and the job is known as one of the best ways in which to acquire a tan.

Approximately 200 acres of land within a mile of Kingston yield rotating crops of vegetables each year and a large share of the vegetables is shipped to New York and to communities in this immediate region.

Other truck gardens are scattered throughout various sections of the county, but the Kingston Flats represent the greatest concentrated area in the county for this purpose. Corn is grown on large tracts of land by some of the farmers in other regions, but few other farms are devoted so extensively to truck farming as those along the Plank road.

Owners of some of the smaller vegetable farms in other parts of the county raise substantial crops for direct peddling in Kingston, but these generally operate on a smaller scale than those of the flats.

Other farms, such as one operated on a large scale, near Old Hurley, specialize in such crops as tomatoes which are sold in the metropolitan markets. A few dairy farmers, and others, who devote their lands to specialized crops, also raise vegetables on a large scale, but these are not generally classed with those across the Esopus creek near Kingston.

Residents of Kingston and other communities of the area take advantage of the fact that fresh vegetables are available shortly after they are picked from the gardens and many of them drive out to the farms for their daily supplies.

Markets in Kingston also have an advantage over those in communities farther removed from farmlands and many of them buy fresh supplies daily from the neighboring farms.

Roadstands Are Many
Roadstands have been built at most of the farms along the flats and from these a substantial business is done each year with tourists and car owners of the vicinity. Displays of flowers on the stands also attract customers from the road and many of the farmers report encouraging sales from this more recent venture.

Garden farming on the whole is as quaint and picturesque today as in ancient times and sturdy figures who give the work of hand to the soil can be seen any hour of the day bending to their tasks far out in the fields. Often the women give a helping hand and some groups resemble the figure of that famous picture "The Angels" with the level lands reaching far out in the background toward the horizon.

Clusters of farm structures, built close to dwellings of the farmers, retain a quaintness characteristic to American farm life, and a few of these date back to the earlier days of farming in this county.

One of the older farm houses near the Kingston Flats is that formerly owned by Charles Williams and which was recently sold to Count Landi, father of Elissa Landi, actress and author. This farm however, will be devoted largely to dairying rather than vegetables.

Another of the older farm houses is that occupied by Fred Will, who owns one of the smaller farms on the Plank Road. Some of his property was acquired recently by the state highway department prior to the building of the new four-lane road on route 28.

Two Separate Sections
Next down from the Will farm toward Kingston is that of John Walker. This besides being one of the most picturesque farms along the road, is one of the largest. Mr. Walker generally plants two separate sections totalling somewhat over 50 acres and a large percentage of his vegetables is shipped to New York.

Most of the other farms range from less than 50 to 10 acres in size, but even the smallest of the group has an unusually large annual yield of vegetables.

Numbered among the larger farms in the region is that of Milton Walker which is the first over the bridge from Kingston. A tract of from 35 to 40 acres is cultivated by this farmer each year and he also operates one of the attractive roadstands.

Other farms are those of Vincent Maggione, who plants about 30 acres; Henry VanKleeck, Floyd Riggins, Dominic Serrano, Harry Britt and Horace Boice, whose acreage ranges from 20 to less than 10 acres. John Modica cultivates about 30 acres, part of which are on the Plank Road and the rest of which is along the Sawkill road.

A few farmers also plant sizeable tracts along the Saugerties road and along the highway leading to Old Hurley. Former Sheriff John Saxe also plants a large tract along the Hurley mountain, but this land is devoted largely to corn.

Within another three weeks, large loads of the vegetables picked fresh from the flats, will be on their way to the metropolitan area and to markets in and around Kingston. These lands will continue yielding crops throughout the summer almost to the beginning of fall and their output will be a definite commercial asset to the county.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)
Cutups' Contest
Morgantown, W. Va. — Name the new hospital here and you can have a free appendicitis operation—whether you need it or not.

The county court made the offer in awarding contracts for a new building to replace the Monongalia County Hospital. Officials thought "County Hospital" sounded too much like a charity institution.

Dog Fishes
Philadelphia—Anthony Merck, Jr., returned from a fishing trip with his Eskimo dog, a six-inch perch—and a story.

He said he dropped his baited line into a pond, set the pole in a crotch and wandered away. The dog remained on the bank.

Returning, Merck said he found the dog had dragged the pole and line to shore—with the perch wiggling on the hook.

Three for One
Los Angeles—When W. P. Roberts, a restaurant cook, broke an egg into a skillet, three yolks popped out. So Roberts, anxious to give his customer a break, served four yolks from two eggs.

"The extras are on the house," he explained.

Impartial Justice
Waupaca, Wis.—Taken before the justice of the peace, Allen Scott was fined $50 for reckless driving and warned a second offense would be punished by a jail term. The justice was the defendant's father, M. B. Scott.

Public Notice
Lincoln, Neb.—A sign in the unimpaired legislature's cloak room warned:

"The general public hereby objects to the snoring of the senators. If you must sleep, don't snore.—A constituent."

Wildcat Digger
Albany, Tex. (AP)—Oil men believe a wildcat test in southern Nolan county is the deepest ever drilled by a portable machine, better known as a "spudder." George Callahan, the driller, went 5,000 feet to fulfill his contract with the oil company and then continued to a depth of 6,011.

We have never thought it was exactly "planned economy" to have a big feast Sunday noon and just eat leftovers for supper.

TWO AGAINST LOVE

by Frances Hanna

The Characters
Jocelyn Russell, beautiful heiress.
Tally Mack, young farmer whose family has inherited half the Russell estate, Seaclyff.

Yesterday: Bob Russell, who is attracted by Gretchen Mack, helps Tally and Gramp build a roadside stand.

Chapter 12 Mad Or Sane?

AFTER the swim Bob joined the square, elchotto covered table and ate a cold supper of baked beans and potato salad supplemented by quantities of fresh milk.

The meal finished, he stated: "I want to pay for the best food I've ever eaten! Get into your hats and coats, all of you, and I'll take you to a movie in Santa Barbara."

"I've got to red up the dishes," Mrs. Mack excused, "and Gramp is worn out. Besides, Betsy has to go to bed by seven. You take Gretchen and Tally along with you, Bob."

Tally darted a look at his sister's expectant face. He did not quite like the idea of her going out with Bob Russell, yet she certainly deserved some fun.

"Sorry, Bob, don't see how I can go. Too much work to finish. Gretchen, you go on with Bob."

Her thin hands trembled a little. "Just—just a minute, Bob. I'll put on my silk dress and change my shoes and stockings."

When Bob and Tally had gone outside to smoke, Gramp shook a crooked forefinger at Della. "This is your doin'! Sendin' them two young folks alone to a picture show. If Gretchen gets a heartbreak it's your fault! That gallyvantin' rich fellow ain't goin' to marry no widow with a sassy kid."

"And why wouldn't he?" Della demanded. "Gretchen's a good girl and a good housekeeper. She ought to have a young man to beau her places."

Grumbling, Gramp extracted his plug of tobacco from his hip pocket, bit into it gingerly and began to chew. "Durned store teeth," he muttered.

Jocelyn, having learned to expect the unexpected, was nevertheless very rudely shocked when Bob escorted her down to view the roadside stand the next morning. It was eleven o'clock and the Macks had already stocked the display shelves with crates of eggs, chickens, of oranges and lemons. A large artistically painted sign fastened up on top of the stand announced the wares they had for sale. Smaller signs were nailed at ten-foot intervals to trees on both sides of the drive.

Jocelyn, appalled, clutched at Bob's arm, holding him back, unwilling to step out from the protection of the orange trees into sight of the enemy.

"You were here yesterday, Bob," she accused. "They like you. You might have been here to reason them out of this. How could you let them do such a thing?"

"Let them?" Bob grinned. "Why, I helped them! I painted the signs and made the shelves. It was my idea. Isn't it grand?"

"I have you completely mad!" she demanded.

"I've gone completely sane," he contradicted, unflinched. "Listen, Lyn, whether you sympathize or not, the fact remains that these people have to earn their bread and clothes and this is the only way they have of doing it. It's decent and it's honest and I say more power to 'em!"

Deeply Grieved
HER lips trembled and tears made dark blue pools of her eyes. When she spoke again her voice was low and bitter.

"You've always been kind to the things Thorne and I believe in, Bob, yet I thought it merely a pose. I never imagined you would turn against me—oh, Bob, how can you look around you and not be hurt by the despoiling of Seaclyff? That horrible fence—like a prison wall—marring the terrace; cows in the riding stable; chickens on the tennis courts; beds of flowers plowed under to make room for carrots and onions! And now this! Dear Bob, it means a thing to you that Seaclyff was built by a great man who became governor of this state? That one of the Presidents of the United States visited here? That this place has been the pride of Santa Barbara for years and years? Our own father would have been Mayor of Santa Barbara if he and—Mother hadn't been in that terrible accident! I—love Seaclyff, Bob. It's the only home I've ever known—I love its history—and now it's being cheapened and commercialized."

He saw she was deeply grieved, yet he could not offer sympathy. "I'm sorry you take it this way, Lyn. I don't even know what to say in defense—not that I consider it necessary to defend my thoughts and actions to you—but I do love you, Lyn. I was five when you were born. I was a lonely child. Thorne and I never got on well, even in childhood. I was crazy about you—" He paused, searching her face with tender eyes, then went on: "Lyn, Grandma Jocelyn knew when she made out her will that the Macks were about to lose their Texas farm. She knew they had not money. I can't believe that she did not foresee what would happen here with their coming. Grandma was hard-headed and practical. I feel sure she would want the Macks to be fed and clothed, don't you? Isn't it better for a family to have the necessities of life than it is to preserve the glory of the past by letting them starve?"

"Thorne offered them five thousand dollars to go away. They refused. We cannot drive them out. The only thing I can do is marry Geoffrey very soon and leave Seaclyff forever. I'm going back to the house, Bob—no, don't come with me."

He watched as she marched with militant steps through the rows of citrus trees.

"Poor kid," he said. Gretchen, excited and rosy, enormously attractive in a starched house-dress of flowered percale, was handing a sack of fruit to a customer as Bob sauntered up to the roadside stand. He waited until she made change and the customer returned to his car.

"Hello," he called. "How's business?"

"Good! I've taken in two dollars and thirty cents already! Almost enough to buy Betsy a new pair of shoes and material for a dress. Isn't it perfect, Bob? We—we need so many things. It's been so long since we had a dollar that didn't have to go for food. We'll never be able to thank you enough for suggesting this. But your sister—what did she say?"

"Nothing much. You see, she's never been hungry or without money."

"Neither have you."

"No. But I have a good imagination."

Telegram
HE BROKE off as a small human whirlwind descended upon him and wrapped its chubby arms about his legs. "Mister Bob," pleaded Betsy, "don't let Uncle Tally spank me... please! I didn't steal nothing—honest I didn't!"

Bob hoisted her to his shoulder, wiped her tear-smudged face with his handkerchief. "Nobody's going to spank you, Betsy. What's wrong?"

Gretchen apprehensive, hurried to them. "What makes you think Uncle Tally will spank you?" she asked, tying the loose strings of Betsy's worn little shoes, pulling down her dress and pushing the silky black hair from her forehead.

Reassured, pleased to be receiving so much attention, Betsy pursed her small mouth and achieved an injured expression. "I went into Joshlyn's garden and picked a whole big bunch of flowers for Grandma and she was awful mad and she said Uncle Tally would spank me because it was stealing—is that stealing, Mister Bob?"

"Well, in a way," he said, suppressing a laugh. "You see, Betsy, those flowers don't belong to you. When you want something that isn't yours you should ask for it first."

Her round black eyes were skeptical. "I wouldn't get 'em if I did. Grandma says I mustn't go on that side of the big fence and I mustn't ever ask Joshlyn things or bother her."

Gretchen's eyes appealed mutely to Bob. He said, "You're forgiven the time, Betsy, but don't do it again. Every time you get an impulse to trespass you come to me and I'll buy you an ice-cream cone."

"What's—a—a impulse to trespass?" she demanded.

"A feeling that you want to do something you know is naughty. Understand?"

Her eyes glinted impishly. "I want to play with that big doll in Joshlyn's bedroom. Mister Bob, is that awfully bad? If I don't do it will I get ice-cream?"

"If you do it you will get a spanking from me!" Gretchen threatened. "Maybe next week I'll buy you a doll."

"Like Joshlyn's?"

"Better," Bob promised. "I'll see to it myself. And now for the ice-cream. Is it all right if I take her into town, Gretchen?"

Betsy's mother seemed embarrassed. "If you want to."

As Bob carried the little girl to his car and put her in the seat Thorne came up. "Going to adopt her?" he queried ironically.

"If might," Bob's voice was cool. Thorne regarded the child with distaste. "You'll spoil her by bringing her on our property, Bob," he said sharply. "She'll overrun the place when we have guests and don't kick the starter and shoved the gear into reverse. 'Oh, shut up,' he said. 'You and Lyn make me sick. Neither of you have a humane instinct in your blue-blooded carcasses!'"

Bob kicked the starter and shoved the gear into reverse. "Oh, shut up," he said. "You and Lyn make me sick. Neither of you have a humane instinct in your blue-blooded carcasses!'"

Bob applied the brakes and leaned over the side of the door. "Well, what is it?"

"I got a wire from Nola. She's flying in from Boston on the afternoon plane. She's coming for a long visit and what will she think about—"

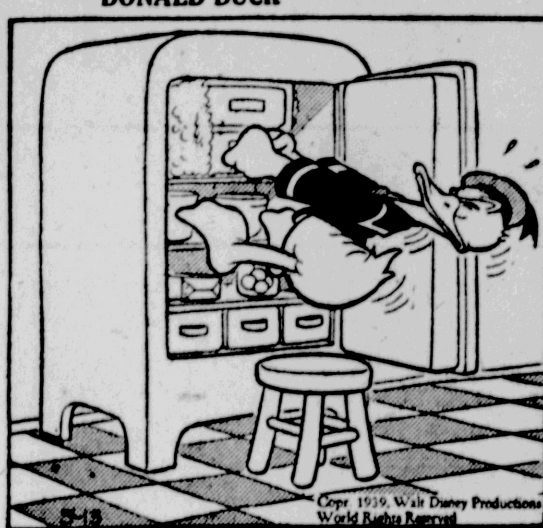

"I don't care what she thinks about anything!" Bob snapped. "She's your fiancée, not mine."

Bob, angered, drove recklessly through the lane between bordering palms until Betsy touched his arm and asked, "What makes you look so mad, Mister Bob?"

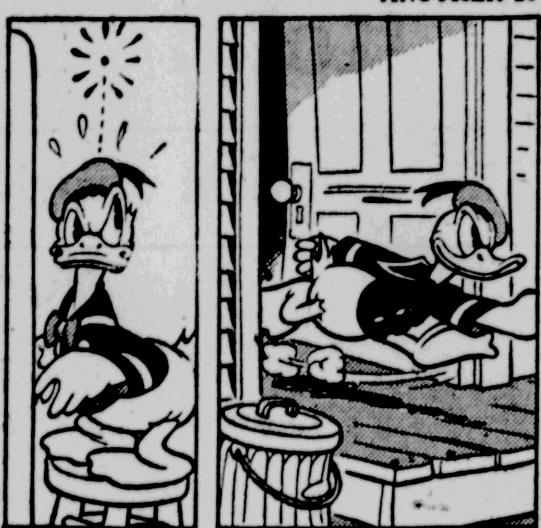

He slowed the car. "Relatives, Betsy. I don't wish them any hard luck but I'd sure like to see them have to earn their bread and butter just once!"

THAT GUILTY FEELING

OFFICE CAT

By Junius
Mrs. Smith—When John first came home from the World War in France I had a terrible time breaking him of some of his old habits. For instance, he always wanted to go to bed with his hobnails on!

Mrs. Jones—Why on earth. Mrs. Smith—He said it reminded the rest of his body how nice it was to sleep in a bed again!

There are decent motorists and there are the other kind, those drivers who drive carelessly through puddle-filled streets, without giving a thought to those nearby who may be drenched. It is a pity some pedestrians do not lay charges against such men.

There are times when one has to be especially careful: A judge, failing of re-election, was made cashier of a local bank. A man presented a check to be cashed.

"Don't know you," greeted the new cashier.

The customer produced a credit card, a business card, and a lot of letters addressed to himself.

"Not sufficient identity," said the cashier, pushing the check back.

"Why I've," protested the man, "I've known you to hang a man on less evidence than that."

"That may be," said the judge, "but when you're paying out money you have to be careful."

Telephone poles are not pretty things but they help save the trees. A car which runs wild and leaves the roadway must hit something.

The scene was a Hollywood film studio. Thousands of extras, dressed as French revolutionaries, storming the bastille (jail), filled the middle distance.

In the foreground, on a rostrum, was the director, bawling through a megaphone: "We're going to do this over and over again—until the guy shouting 'whoopie' decides to cooperate."

Careful investigation reveals that a telephone pole never hits a motor car except in self-defense.

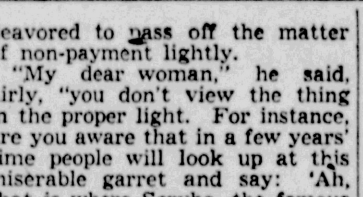

Co-ed (sympathetically)—Did you get hurt when you were on the football eleven?

Hayton—No, it happened while the eleven were on me.

Next to seeing the doctor arrive when you're sick nothing is quite so welcome as the approach of a wrecker when your car is in the ditch.

One man admits that his wife is the only one in his family who made a brilliant marriage.

Special Activities At Y. W. For Week

Activities appropriate to the season form the program for the Y. W. C. A. Girl Reserves for the coming week, with the high of being the May Day breakfast to be held by the Tri Hi girls on Friday morning at 7:45 a. m. at the association. This affair was inaugurated last year and proved to be a great success and the members promise an equally interesting party for this season. All reservations must be made in advance.

Members of the Blue Triangle Club will meet at the "Y" as usual on Monday afternoon, while the T. M. T. and Friendly Triangle Clubs will assemble at the building at 4:30 p. m. for a picnic. The Ever Ready Club will hold a regular meeting at 3:45 p. m. Tuesday afternoon. The Pep Club and the Wide Awake Clubs will both hold picnics, meeting at 10 o'clock.

Other Girl Reserve groups meeting will be the Y's Ones at No. 1 school on Wednesday and the Live Yer freshman high school club at the Y. W. C. A. on Wednesday at 3:30 p. m. The Cheerio Club on Thursday at 3:30 p. m. and the Sophomore Club on Friday at 3:30 p. m. As usual, the Blue Birds will hold their program at the association on Saturday morning beginning at 10 o'clock.

Special plans are being made by the Y. G. B. I. Club for its annual banquet which will be held at the association building Tuesday at 6:15 p. m. All members of the club are urged to attend and reservations should be made at the "Y" office by Monday noon.

Garden Party Committees Meet

Committees on arrangements for the garden party at the Academy of St. Ursula June 1 are meeting daily to discuss plans for making this one of the best garden parties sponsored by Moner's Association of the Academy. The card committee reports the approximately 30 tables have been reserved for the afternoon and evening of cards. Those who have not already reserved a table may do so through Mrs. J. Edward Conway, telephone 4095 or Mrs. Thomas F. Crowley, telephone 2824. The super committee met Friday at the home of Mrs. Peter Camp, 46 West Pierpont street, to make arrangements for the evening's supper. Members on this committee are Mrs. Thomas Purvis and Mrs. David Flaherty.

Hadassah Pins Mother's Night

The members of Junior Hadassah will hold a Mother's Night celebration Monday at 8 o'clock at the Hebrew School. Miss Sophie Weiner, chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements, urges that all members and friends bring their mothers to help celebrate the occasion and make the night a success. The picnic committee will meet at 8 o'clock prior to the celebration. Members of the picnic committee are Miss Althea Schaefer, chairman, and the Misses Phyllis Brown, Edith Epstein, Sadi Lutzky, Miriam Mann, Ruth Gomer, Euse Silverberg, Florence Simon, Hilda Spizman, Ann Weisman and Mrs. Beatrice Katzoff. All those on the committee are requested to be present.

Rabbi Herman W. Saville, 29, of the Sinai Temple, New York, will offer the invocation and conduct the morning service. Following the exercises, a luncheon will be held.

World's Dogs Sprang From North American Ancestor

All the world's dogs sprang from an ancestor that made its home on the North American continent, according to Sigmund Boehm's "The Family Tree of the Dog," in the American Kennel Gazette. This ancestor was a small animal, about 20 inches in length, called the "Cynodictis." It roamed the great arid plains of western North America during the Oligocene period some 35,000,000 years ago. Boehm bases his article on the work at the University of California in Berkeley.

Considering that this continent furnished the first dogs, it is strange that out of the 109 breeds of purebred dogs recognized by the American Kennel club, only seven reached their present form in Canada, Mexico or the United States. These breeds are American foxhound, Boston terrier, Chesapeake Bay retriever, Chihuahua, Labrador retriever, Mexican hairless and Newfoundland.

The scientists have gone back even farther than the Cynodictis, and are studying the Miocene, a civet-like animal the size of a weasel, which lived 60,000,000 years ago. Of the work at the University of California, Boehm writes:

"It will be a surprise to many to learn that the continent of North America must be considered the ancestral home of the canine. Proof for this assertion is that the fossil record of the dog's development is especially complete and easily followed in North America. The Museum of Paleontology has a collection of fossils gathered all over the West and as far east as Texas and South Dakota. Five hundred skulls of the great Ice Age world from the La Brea tar pits alone are represented there."

Nature's Freaks Seen on Trips to Bermuda Islands

Mother Nature has showered a choice group of "Believe It or Not" on the Bermuda Islands. There are many oddities in fruit and flowers on the "Arcadia in the Mid-Atlantic," according to Ernest C. Riedel, a writer who has spent much time in Bermuda.

There are, for instance: The thistle plant with yellow flowers, altogether unlike the American thistle. It has no thorns and is tender enough to be eaten by rabbit and fowl.

Hibiscus hedges—as fast as they are trimmed of flowers, they are replaced overnight by flowers, and grow to an enormous size.

The traveler's tree, so called because it gives drinkable water when tapped.

The honey-puzzle tree, so called because its trunk is covered with thorns—and is therefore unclimbable.

The air pine vine which grows only upon boards, wires, dead wood and tin.

The "plume" of the bamboo or cane, which dried and dipped in dye, makes an ornament that lasts for years.

The small vine, "rock sample," which many natives brew as a substitute for tea and coffee.

The dried calabash. Hang it in a tree and the wrens will take possession of it as a home.

Airplane's History

Credit for invention of the airplane is given Orville and Wilbur Wright of Dayton, Ohio. Others before them attempted to solve the problems of artificial flight, among whom were Lillienthal and Chanute, with gliders; Ader, Maxim and Langley built power-driven machines which were usually destroyed by accidents at the first trial. The Wright brothers found after many tests that the current theories were in part correct, but merely gave work to a great extent. They turned their attention toward means of securing stability of a machine when in the air, and succeeded in developing a system of maintaining balance and control by bending or warping the ends of the planes and using an elevating rudder in front. They achieved their first successful flights, which were from 12 to 59 seconds, at Kitty Hawk, N. C., on December 17, 1903.

University Goes On the Air To Bring College to Everyone

Tante Alice and Uncle Philippe Give Farming Hints With Their Folk Tales

(By The AP Feature Service)

Baton Rouge, La.—Once a week Uncle Philippe puts aside his farm tools and calls his wife and son together for a family chat. Then—or later—their friends for miles around hear the conversation.

The family jokes and talks in French, not the Parisian variety but the dialect peculiar to the Southwest Louisiana "Cajun" country where live most of the state's half-million French-speaking citizens.

This homey conversation is transcribed by Louisiana State University and recordings of the programs are passed around to radio stations for broadcast.

Uncle Philippe, his wife, Tante Alice, and their son, all faculty members, get a lot of folk tales on the radio that way, and sandwich attractively into the stories are bits of information on how to tend potatoes, cure pork, bake bread, grow flowers—even how to remove a bathtub stain.

That's the idea behind the programs—they are one phase of a vast project designed to extend the university's teaching facilities throughout the state.

Other broadcasts give lessons in history, agriculture, home economics, music appreciation, vocational guidance, and current affairs. Ralph Steele, 26-year-old director of the programs, explains the idea this way:

"We feel we have a vast fount of knowledge here at the university which is unavailable to a lot of people because they just can't drop everything and come here to class. So we're going to take that knowledge to them."

Seven stations donate a total of 20 hours a week in 15-minute broadcasts for the work.

BABY HOSTAGE SAFE WITH MAMA

Fourteen-month-old Jimmy Sulcer doesn't know how lucky he is to be sitting safe on the lap of his mother, Mrs. Opal Sulcer, of Sidney, Neb. His father, James W. Sulcer, held Jimmy as a hostage in a farmhouse bedroom during an eight-hour siege by officers. Sheriff W. W. Schulz rescued the baby and later Sulcer shot and killed himself.

Giant's Causeway Formed Through Basalt Upheaval

The formation of the Giant's Causeway, according to geologists, is the result of an upheaval of basalt along the northern coast of Ireland which occurred during the Tertiary period. This left a weird and unusual promontory of broken pillars in a series of cliffs which project into the North channel near Bengore Head, about eight miles from Portrush.

When the volcanoes of this district were in activity they sent out sheets of lava over nearly the whole country of Antrim and the adjoining parts of Londonderry and Tyrone. Their molten masses were poured out over the chalk that lies deep below, and ages of erosion have left the cold and rigid column seen today.

Within an area of several hundred square yards there are some 40,000 of these pillar-shaped rocks and they are cut as if by mathematical calculation. They range in diameter from 15 to 30 inches, most of them being six-sided, although some have five, seven, eight, and even nine regularly formed sides. Some are 20 feet in height.

The Giant's Causeway received its name from a legend that this group of basaltic rocks was once a part of a bridge or causeway over which giants passed between Ireland and Scotland.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Raw Materials Insurance

Deficient in 21 "strategic" raw materials essential for the manufacture of war-time necessities, the United States buys these materials from far-off sources in Europe and Asia, ships them home by way of such strategically vulnerable waters as the Black sea, the Suez canal and the Mediterranean. Manganese, essential for the manufacture of steel, is secured from distant Russia, India and Africa, only to a lesser extent from Brazil and Cuba. Solution of one of America's prime defense problems was recently brought nearer when the American-owned Cuban-American Manganese corporation reported that it had cut costs of producing high-grade ore to the point that it is able to compete with foreign producers even in the face of low world prices.

Travel Innovation

A travel innovation that appeals to people who know how to ride, and who enjoy country days in the saddle, is the European horseback tour. Initiated in Hungary two years ago, it has spread to England and Sweden, with Ireland and Norway added this year to the growing list. Trips, at least the riding part, are limited to seven days, for, as pointed out by a representative of the London firm routing them, that is about all the average horseman or horsewoman can stand without undue strain. Approximately 25 miles are covered daily, and the nights are spent in different places—castles, manors and village inns. Expert horsemen, frequently an cavalry officer, are in charge of the parties.

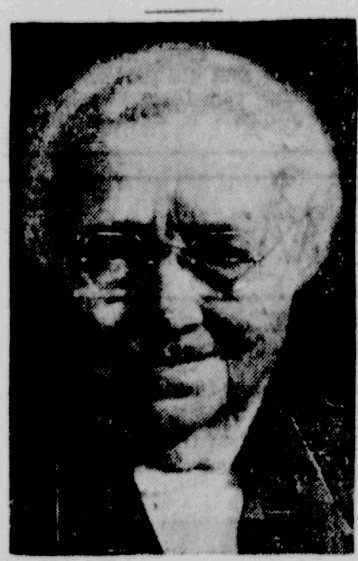

MODES of the MOMENT

A cool spring has kept fur jackets in the Fifth Avenue fashion parade longer than usual this year. This one, by Jaekel, is made of something different in pelts—Persian kitt fox, dyed to shade from biscuit to deep caramel. It's off to cocktails with a navy blue wool frock, a flower toque and a caramel beige pouch bag with orchids pinned to its side.

The Kingston Kresge store, as well as the other 738 allied stores throughout the country, are during the week preceding Mother's Day displaying in their windows the smiling picture of Mrs. Catherine Kresge of Saylorsburg, Pa., mother of the founder of the Kresge stores. On November 7 Mrs. Kresge will celebrate the 100th anniversary of her birth. She still has full possession of all her faculties, is blessed with a keen appetite and a rich sense of humor. She was born Catherine Kunkle in Pennsylvania. In 1912 she celebrated her golden wedding anniversary with her husband, Sebastian Kresge, who died a few years later. Of her nine children two are living, a son and a daughter. There are also 25 grandchildren and 45 great-grandchildren.

THE GREAT CHARTER

There is much interest shown by Americans in the copy of "Magna Carta," the famous charter of liberties granted by King John at Runnymede in 1215, now shown at the New York Fair. And there would be more interest if people could read it. That document is the foundation not only of modern English law but of American law.

But there has been a good deal of hocus-pocus and misunderstanding about it. As the National Encyclopedia remarks, contrary to general belief, it "did not guarantee trial by jury." It was not designed primarily to protect popular rights; it was wrested from the King by the nobles or barons to protect their special rights. The "freemen" referred to were the feudal landholders. Rights were expected to trickle down from them benevolently to the people under them. It took centuries for the common people of England to gain the constitutional rights and privileges which our American colonists, in the time of the Revolution, had come to expect as a matter of course.

Even so, it represented great progress for the 13th century, and it would be great if the people in Germany, Italy, Russia and various other modern "authoritarian" countries could catch up with it.

EQUALITY IN THE CORRIDOR

A special convention drawn in 1921 supposedly regulated the problem of railroad communications between Germany and East Prussia through Pomorze, the Polish Corridor. That agreement placed five railroad lines at Germany's disposal. Only two are used by Germany today, and only one of the two carries heavy traffic.

That line, however, carried 1,500,000 passengers and 4,500,000 tons of freight in 1938, on German trains. Germans using the lines are free from passport regulations, currency control and customs inspection. Fares are the same as those charged within Germany. Passengers pay the Reich railroads in Reich currency. The railroads settle accounts with the Polish railroads at stated periods. During the last three years, because of German exchange difficulties, half of the payments have been accepted in kind by Poland.

There is an arbitration court which has met only three times since 1921. It was set up to take care of any disputes or injustices by fair and legal means.

All this suggests that Hitler's claim to be righting wrongs formerly done to Germany have little justification.

AGE AND OFFICE JOBS

"Are business men men or Romeos?" asks a young woman after trying vainly to get a job. "They want experience, some college training, ability to take rapid dictation and transcribe accurately. But the stenographer must be not a day over 27, and if she is in her thirties she doesn't get an interview."

"Employment agencies are very reluctant to take your application if you are past 30. There are two agencies in the city where I live that won't take them at all. And they are frank to tell you why."

One such agency obtained a place for the writer at $140 a month, she says, when she was 26. She gave up her job to marry, and before long her husband died. Now, in her "late thirties", presumably as competent as ever, and with more knowledge and stability than she used to have, she cannot even get a hearing.

So many such cases come to attention that this matter of working women's age and of current business and professional standards seems a very serious matter. It looks as if some cases besides what are often termed the "submerged" groups are not getting a square deal, particularly in the larger cities.

SENSELESS AUTOGRAPHS

Paul Whiteman sets fellow celebrities a good example. He doesn't like autograph-hounds and he won't sign their proffered dotted lines, albums or program margins. Whiteman has been known as the King of Jazz and Dean of Modern Music and has been a popular band and orchestra leader for a good many years now. He holds his admiring public in spite of curt rebuffs to signature-seekers.

Boundless good nature, or fear of offending

"their public," has held too many other stars in one field or another at the mercy of merciless autograph-collectors. They are too easy-going and are encouraging something which needs to be discouraged. The autographs collected by the average "fan" these days have no real interest to collectors. When hundreds of such signatures exist for any celebrity they become a drug on the market.

Other pestered creatures might take heart and learn to say no to the next autograph nuisance who come their way.

This royal visit begins to seem very folksy. When the King and the President settle down at Hyde Park for a good talk, how long will it be until they're calling each other George and Frank? And will it be "My Dear" with Eleanor and Elizabeth?

This should be a lesson to window-washers: A young man in New York got badly hurt by walking through a plate glass window which was so clean that he could not see it.

A weather addict complains that the mean temperature this spring has been meaner than usual.

While other nations are all getting ready to fight each other, we lucky dogs only have to fight among ourselves.

Illinois is growing amazingly modern; its legislature has voted to let women serve on juries.

Europe now is experimenting with a lot of ideas "noble in purpose" but cockeyed in practice.

The main trouble with public relief is that it tends to become a vested interest.

Blessed are the peacemakers, but they certainly do get kicked around.

This is the land of quantity production, in politics and oratory as in other things.

LARGE MEALS MAY CAUSE ANGINA

A professor of medicine died a few months ago at the age of 80. When he was about 45 years of age he discovered that he had heart disease and would have to live a careful life if he was to live at all. Comparing himself to a bridge that had been able to carry 10 tons but could now carry only 5 tons, he endeavored to do his work at half his usual speed. The result was that he saved or prolonged his life by over 35 years.

Now, doing your work at half speed does not refer to physical work alone but to all the daily body processes and particularly to the eating and digesting of food.

Dr. G. Werley, El Paso, Texas, in Southwestern Medicine in discussing angina—pain under the breast bone—and hardening of the blood vessels carrying blood from the heart to all parts of the body and to the heart muscle itself, says that many cases are due to allergy—being sensitive to various substances—and, in some cases, this sensitivity combined with nervousness. However, these attacks of angina may be a blessing in disguise in that they call attention to what would be a dangerous or fatal condition if the individual were to be careless about his daily life habits.

The presence of angina is a signal of danger that if heeded and followed by correction, especially of bad eating habits, may actually prolong life and thus be advantageous.

I have spoken before of the man past seventy, all of whose brothers had died in their early fifties. When asked why he was so fortunate as to be alive at his advanced age, he replied, "Well, I always had a poor appetite."

Dr. Werley tells us that the chief cause of angina can be traced to what has gone down the gullet (throat).

Another warning is that overeating puts extra work on the heart, just as does physical work, therefore, small meals may prevent these attacks of angina.

Those consisted of combinations like 66-777, or those ending in double-0 and triple-0. Such numbers were picked out of the lots as shipments came in. Rudy said it would have taken too much work to fish out a plain number like 21-794.

Tribute in Court to V. B. Van Wageningen and A. C. Connelly

Tribute to two of the oldest members of the Ulster County Bar Association was paid Monday in Supreme Court when resolutions in memory of Arthur C. Connelly and Virgil B. Van Wageningen were presented and made a part of the court record. Offered by committees appointed to draw up suitable resolutions in behalf of the Bar Association the resolution in memory of Mr. Connelly was presented by Assemblyman J. Edward Conway and Judge George F. Kaufman presented the resolution on the passing of Mr. Van Wageningen.

Following the offering of the resolutions members of the Bar Association spoke briefly including former County Judge Joseph M. Fowler, a member of the law firm of Fowler & Connelly, who commented briefly upon the outstanding lives of both of the deceased members. Justice Sydney F. Foster, presiding justice, spoke briefly in directing the resolutions spread upon the minutes of the court.

Both members of the bar for many years and outstanding attorneys of the county, the following resolutions on the death of Mr. Connelly and Mr. Van Wageningen were made part of the court record:

In 1890, Arthur C. Connelly was admitted to the Bar of this state. He commenced his scholastic preparation in the Old Kingston Academy and continued his academic training at Syracuse University from which he earned the degree of A. B. and A. M. He further pursued his studies at Columbia from which university he was graduated with the degree of LL.B. His early professional association was with the then well known offices of Bernard and Pico, later Bernard and Van Wageningen and with the Hon. John J. Linson. Thereafter he practiced his profession from a personal office in what is now the Leventhal Building until 1925 when was formed the partnership of Fowler & Connelly at 293 Wall Street, which existed at the time of his death, February 3, 1939.

In the nearly fifty years of active practice there was included in his career about ten years service as Clerk of the Surrogate's Court, a term as Corporation Counsel of the City of Kingston and upwards of ten years as United States Commissioner, all of which activities accentuated his professional abilities in those particular fields of the law.

No man can practice a profession for a life time, especially in a rural county, without establishing a rating in the minds of his brethren who have acquired an accurate knowledge of the man and the lawyer and in Mr. Connelly's case such rating is one of which his family and friends may well be proud. We of the Bench and Bar will remember him as a lawyer of unusual professional ability who served his clients faithfully and honestly but who also insisted upon honesty on the part of his clients in their relations with others. His word of moral agreement was everywhere accepted as readily as written stipulations.

Seldom did the plaudits of the crowd ring in his ears for he sought not the praise and commendation of his fellow men, but only that he might do his plain duty day by day as he saw it. Thus he earned the respect and admiration of all who knew him. We who here sorrowfully note his passing, know that the Ulster County Bar has lost a stalwart member from its ranks and now find a gap not easily to be filled.

In his extra-professional activities, we think of him as a man largely responsible for the development of the Kingston Co-operative Savings and Loan Association, active in social and public services and deeply interested in fraternal activities.

All this and more which is indelible in the memories of today's Bench and Bar, but in order that those who follow us may have a record of our appraisement of, and affectionate regard for, Arthur C. Connelly, we, a committee of the Ulster County Bar Association, do:

Some Sort of Tax Revision Bill Seems Certain at This Session of Congress
By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, May 13—Some sort of tax revision bill seems certain to be presented to congress at this session. Sentiment for it in both houses is substantial. The attitude of the administration toward the proposed legislation is uncertain, but it is not correct to say this attitude is hostile.

The President's position in a nutshell is that, for every tax repealed, there ought to be another which would yield the same amount of revenue. He places the burden of working out such a scheme on congress, where, of course, it belongs. Those persons who think Mr. Roosevelt is failing to cooperate with business when he declines to assert himself aggressively on behalf of tax revision entirely overlook the fact that this is a spending congress.

Judging by the size of the new farm bill just passed by overwhelming vote in the Senate, every member who ever made a speech in favor of a balanced budget or economy and yet voted for the new farm bill owes a letter of apology to President Roosevelt and Governor Eccles of the federal reserve board. Certainly there is no encouragement in this action for Mr. Roosevelt now to offer a program of tax reduction which will further reduce governmental revenues.

The whole situation as between the opposition to the administration and the President is getting more and more clouded. On the one hand, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States adopts resolutions which administration spokesmen and high officials regard as an attempt to scrap the whole New Deal program without regard to objectives, and on the other hand, business critics are insisting that the administration ought to be making more overtures to business. Reconciliation of opposing views and the working out of a program have not been made easier by the events of the last few days.

The tax program, to be sure, had its origin in congressional resistance that something be done at this session to remove the "deterrents" to business. Much discussion of that word has left doubts as to what is meant. In the view of Undersecretary Hanes at the treasury and others, the word has reference to clauses in the present tax laws which, for instance, do not bring in any revenue at all, but which deter business reorganizations and changes in corporate structure. All sorts of inequities are present in the law which prevent the treasury from reaping as much revenue as it should. There are other things, called "deterrents," which are in the nature of "incentives," and these lie in the conjectural realm as to what revenue might be brought in.

Certainly, so far as the administration is concerned, it has to be persuaded that business will be improved if all the proposed changes in the tax laws are made. Likewise, it would doubtless like to know how much further toward increasing the deficit and the national debt congress proposes to go and how the legislators are going to raise the money to pay for their new spending follies.

The President has been cautious about the tax revision program from the start. The treasury has been enthusiastic and has been working hard trying to develop the right amendments. Mr. Roosevelt keeps his own counsel and his own strategy, but it would seem that he really wants something done about the tax laws, especially cumbersome and unworkable provisions, and that he is willing to go along on some rate changes, but that if congress keeps on increasing the deficit and if business keeps on trying to sabotage his program in congress, he may not bestir himself on the tax program. There is no evidence of this trend as yet, but it is an explanation of recent happenings which is plausible in view of the way political currents move in the national capital.

The analysis would appear to be all the more reasonable because the actual amount of money involved in the proposed tax changes is relatively a small sum compared to the size of the whole deficit, and there is much to be said for the argument that, if business is given the proper incentives, the treasury may find itself with expanding tax receipts and a genuine recovery movement under way.

The strategy of the President in his relations with Congress is not always visible to the naked eye. At this instance it would seem that either public sentiment for tax revision is not as strong as it is cracked up to be, and hence Mr. Roosevelt can afford to be lukewarm about it, or else that the President prefers to let Congress have the ball this session and take full responsibility. This latter way used to be the method of enacting tax laws, and the strange thing is that the senators and representatives do not yet realize that it is their function to write the laws and to get from the executive departments various suggestions, recommendations and data, and not instructions as to how to legislate.

Eight-Foot Banks of Snow
A card from Mr. and Mrs. George H. Brooks, dated Tacoma, Washington, May 7, stated that they had reached there on that date, having covered considerably more than 9,000 miles so far. Mr. Brooks writes, "We had to plough through eight-foot banks of snow to get to the inn for dinner. Saw a Rocky Mountain goat two feet from our car, and plenty of deer."

Old and battered card tables may often be salvaged with a coat of gay paint, and, if necessary, a new top of thin painted wood.

The Ulster County Bar Association present this memorial to Virgil B. Van Wageningen to the Supreme Court of the State of New York at a term thereof to be held in and for the County of Ulster and request that it be entered in full in the record of the Court and that a copy thereof be transmitted by the Clerk to the family of Mr. Van Wageningen.

FASHIONS and HOUSEHOLD HINTS FOR WOMEN

Our Royal Visitors Like To Be Just Folks— But Of Course They Must Think Of Their Job

Children Can Prepare Dinners As A Tribute On Mother's Day

Britain's king and queen are scheduled to arrive in Canada May 15 and in the United States May 17—the first time British monarchs have visited North America. Their activities will make interesting news, but even more interesting is the story of what this young royal couple really is like. That's the story William McGaffin tells.

By WILLIAM MCGAFFIN
(AP) Feature Service Writer
London—There's a small town quality about Bert and Betty Windsor that is likely to warm the heart of America when they go calling this June.

Strip them of royalty's trappings, and you have an unpretentious couple who like nothing better than to drop in on the neighbors for a quiet chat.

This, of course, is impossible while they're "on duty" as king and queen of England. But when they get away for their annual vacation in Scotland they visit the villagers, whom they call by their first names, and lead an informal life that would have made some of their noble predecessors gasp.

Not 'Smart Set' Type

Most Englishmen like the picture of simplicity such details build, although critics brand their majesties as dull and colorless.

King George VI, who's 43, and Queen Elizabeth, 38, certainly aren't the type to fit in, say, with the international smart set. They spend a deal of time on their two daughters—Princess Elizabeth, 13, who may succeed her father on the throne, and Princess Margaret Rose, 8.

Their majesties reflect their homespun tastes in innumerable ways.

When they ascended the throne, old friends began to address them as "sir" and "ma'am"—but not for long. "What's wrong with 'Bert' and 'Betty'?" their majesties wanted to know.

He Breaks American

On week-ends at Windsor they prefer to stay at the royal lodge rather than the castle.

On state occasions their majesties offer a fancy French menu, but for their everyday meals they relish underdone beef, over-boiled Brussels sprouts and other typically English fare.

But their diet isn't all English. The king has an American breakfast—orange juice, toast and coffee—while the queen's weakness is a huge Scottish tea of weight-producing scones and jam.

Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth

The queen is a good cook and she keeps the menus balanced and easily digestible. The king has had to watch his diet ever since the World War, when he underwent an operation for duodenal ulcer.

He never drinks anything stronger than a weak whiskey and soda and his favorite nightcap is hot milk or cocoa—a habit he acquired in his navy days. The queen sips a glass of wine and smokes occasionally.

Have Old Friends In

Their majesties never have been what you would call society people. Now, of course, they do lots of "must" entertaining, but, following that old pattern as closely as they can, they set aside one or two nights a week to have old friends to the palace for dinner and a private movie.

Both enjoy good conversation, at which the king is especially adept. Both dance well, the king preferring a fox trot, the queen a waltz.

Elizabeth buys all-British clothes and is getting to be something of a style setter, even though her sister-in-law, Marina, the Duchess of Kent, usually takes top honors with her French chic.

George, however, is the tailor's despair. Tailors tried to build him up after brother Edward left, but gave it up as a bad job.

The queen's wardrobe problem is complicated because she is rather short and plump. That is one reason she favors loose, three-quarter length coats usually trimmed with fur, and two-piece suits.

Helps Her Pick Hats

She is fond of halo hats (which the king helps her choose) because they give her height. She wears high-heeled shoes for the same reason.

Gray fox is her favorite fur, blue her favorite color and pearls her favorite jewels.

The queen uses rouge, lipstick and eyeshadow lightly, and has a permanent wave in her long, dark hair. She uses a natural shade of nail polish and has never plucked her heavy eyebrows.

Two Million, 'And Worth It'
The king plays tennis and golf and shoots often as the guest or host of J. P. Morgan. His Majesty also fishes, but probably his favorite sport is horseback riding.

The queen is said to be as good at fishing as he and she goes hunting occasionally, but only as a spectator. Hers are the more lady-like recreations—playing the piano and harp and doing needle work.

Both have the British passion for long walks, both enjoy reading. His taste runs to newspapers, novels and biographies.

Ordinarily they arise at 7:30, work from 9 to 5:30 or 6 (the queen using a portable typewriter for her correspondence) and retire at 10:30.

They get more than $2,000,000 a year—and in the opinion of the average Englishman earn every penny of it.

By MRS. ALEXANDER GEORGE
AP Feature Service Writer

Once a year, at least, mother should be the guest of honor in her own home—on Mother's Day, of course.

If the children are very young, perhaps dinner in a restaurant will have to be the holiday feature. But if the children are old enough, there's nothing she'd appreciate more than to have them plan and prepare the dinner, giving her an opportunity to do just as she likes.

It's better to plan a simple meal and have it well cooked and attractively served.

For a top-of-the-stove meal, you could serve lamb or veal chops with mashed potatoes and buttered asparagus or beans. That will leave plenty of time for concentrating on a nice salad or dessert.

A gelatin or vegetable mold can be made a day ahead, then unmolded on lettuce and topped with salad dressing just before serving.

Fruited Angel Food Cake would be a festive dessert. And its quite easy to make. Use fresh or canned strawberries as filling for inch-thick layers of angel food cake. Cover top and sides with flavored whipped cream and serve with forks.

You can make an equally delicious dessert by using canned peaches or pears between the layers in place of the berries, and covering it with chocolate sauce.

The ambitious Mother's Day cook can serve fried chicken. Buttered new potatoes and creamed carrots, or peas or broccoli are good vegetables to pick from. You could serve a tossed salad—sliced radishes, cucumbers, green pepper, cabbage and lettuce—with cheese dressing, a little Roquefort added to French dressing.

If there's a champion biscuit maker in the house, this is her (or his) time to shine. Serve hot biscuits with currant jelly.

Top off your chicken dinner with ice cream or sherbet (buy that) and some home made cake.

If an oven meal is the choice, select roast beef, lamb or veal. During the last 40 minutes of cooking, flank the roast with peeled new potatoes and carrots and cook until golden brown. If you're roasting veal add some minced onions and celery for additional flavor.

A variety of salads are good to go with a roast—plain green ones moistened with French dressing, the dresser fruit and vegetable types, with mayonnaise or salad dressing.

Appetizers often appeal to youngsters when preparing meals. Chilled tomato juice, with a dash of lemon juice and horseradish, or fruit juices mixed with a few drops of oil of peppermint, or diced pineapple are good selections. Having this first course on the table when dinner is announced adds a festive note.

Chocolate Half-and-Half

Tapioca Cream
(Serves Eight)

1/3 cup quick-cooking tapioca, 1/2 cup granulated sugar, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1 or 2 egg yolks, 4 cups milk, 1 or 2 egg whites, stiffly beaten, 1 teaspoon flavoring.

Combine tapioca, sugar, salt, yolks and milk in top of double boiler and stir to break yolks. Place over rapidly boiling water, bring to scalding point (5 to 7 minutes) and cook 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Remove from boiling water. Fold a small amount into egg white. Add to remaining tapioca and blend. Col. (Mixture thickens as it cooks.) Add flavoring. Fold chocolate sauce into part of tapioca cream. Chill. Serve in parfait glasses, in alternate layers with plain tapioca cream. Serve with additional chocolate sauce.

Chocolate Sauce

(Makes 2 1/2 Cups)

2 squares unsweetened chocolate, 2 cups milk, 2/3 cup granulated sugar, 2 1/2 tablespoons flour, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Add chocolate to milk and heat in double boiler. When chocolate is melted, beat with rotary beater until blended. Combine sugar, flour and salt. Add gradually to chocolate and cook until thick, stirring constantly. Continue cooking 5 minutes, stirring occasionally. Add butter and vanilla,

Spring Mode Fits Mothers To A 'T'

By ADELAIDE KERR
AP Fashion Editor

That famous little girl silhouette has come to town again in new spring and summer clothes for mother!

Designers had young things in mind when they carved out that youthful profile, but now the new mode seems to be better than they thought, for little-girl clothes fit the matron's figure.

Moreover, they give mother the greatest fashion "break" she has ever had, says the clothes counsel for a leading Fifth Avenue shop, who settles each year the wardrobe worries of thousands of women who are frankly fifty or more. Listen to her opinion and some of the tips based on it.

"There's never been a better camouflage for the 'middle aged spread,' than the little-girl silhouette, for it falls in soft fullness from the hips and no one can tell what the hip measurement really is. To get the most flattering line, let the skirt remain fitted to the hip line and the fullness break from there, seeing that it does not extend too far out on each side.

"If the waistline is no longer slender, be careful to have the jacket fitted at the hip line, but not too tight at the waistline, thus drawing attention away from the midriff.

"As far as skirt lengths are concerned, the best effect is obtained with a hemline slightly lower than the bulge in the calf of the leg, which should never show, even in a young girl."

The little-girl silhouette appears in a number of new spring suits for mother designed of sheer wool with gently fitted jackets and gored or pleated skirts. It has also come to town in charming printed ensembles that combine a simple frock (pleated or gored as to skirt) with a trim little jacket. Nearly all the patterns splash a blue, green, or gray background with white.

But there are plenty of other clothes for mothers who want to leave the little-girl silhouette for "the younger generation." Sheer wool tailcoats are cut with fitted niplength jackets and many coats swing straight from the shoulders.

For bridge parties and teas, mother's fashions include a number of crepe frocks in soft blues, hyacinths and grays. There is also a whole fleet of printed ensembles combining a crepe frock or foundation with a sheer redingote stamped with the same print.

The strong spring vogue for white is repeated in straw sailors, flower toques, gloves and lingerie touches to smarten dark clothes.

A printed ensemble for mothers who cling to classic lines combines a thistle (cocoa rose) crepe foundation printed in white with a sheer coat of the same printed pattern. Thistle velvet ribbon trims it and orchids give it a festive touch.

Here is a version of the little-girl silhouette in a suit for mother. It is designed of sheer dark blue wool, with a double-breasted fitted jacket and pleated skirt. A veiled white straw sailor and white gloves give it fashion frosting.

Dutch Kast - Unusual Among Antiques In U. S.

The Dutch kas, or kasten, was a furniture form brought from the Low Countries. It is unique among American antique pieces in that it was solely by craftsmen of Holland origin or descent from people of the same racial strain and, in consequence, was confined to the sections where the Dutch settled. There were New York, western Long Island, the Hudson River valley and some parts of New Jersey, such as the Hackensack valley.

Always large and imposing, the kas was used for storing linens or other household possessions. It was in favor from the Seventeenth through the Eighteenth centuries, says "American Collector." Any mad afterword would be of rural origin and rank as survival pieces. In construction and decorative details these kases consistently show the identity characteristic of Dutch craftsmanship. If made of walnut, the carvations were achieved by panel and applied molding in geometric shapes. When of soft wood, such as pine, tulip or red gum, they were generally painted with a decoration of fruits and foliage. Invariably they were provided with bold, bunus, front feet and an ample, not to say heavy, overhanging cornice.

Shrooms have been cultivated commercially in the United States for less than a half century.

TOLD AND SOLD DAILY

The headline to this advertisement isn't merely a catchy but meaningless jingle—the thought it expresses is really based on the soundest logic and soundest merchandising, as a moment of reflection will prove. For it stands to reason that before a merchant can make a sale to a customer he must attract that customer into his store.

Every merchant knows the value of location—he knows that if his store is situated on a street which has considerable sidewalk traffic his business will vary in proportion to this traffic. He knows, too, that this takes place because potential customers are attracted by his offerings displayed in his windows. He sees to it that his windows tell passersby that he has money-saving values for them.

Freeman advertising offers all the advantages of an ideal "traffic" location and more. It is the modern magic carpet which daily transports more than 10,077 Freeman reader families on a tour of Kingston advertisers' stores. It is the medium by which the greatest number of potential customers can be told at the least cost.

And Freeman advertising sells 'em as it tells 'em! Freeman reader families have found that it is a reliable index to authentic values. That it gives them a chance to compare price and quality . . . that it saves them time and trouble and money . . . that it enables them to do their marketing in an easy chair. It sells 'em, furthermore, because it finds them in a receptive mood . . . at home.

Mr. Merchant, 10,077 Freeman reader families are waiting to be told and sold daily. Use the Daily Freeman—the most efficient and most economical advertising medium—to tell 'em and sell 'em!

The Consistent Advertiser Gets The Best Results!
It pays to advertise consistently! Daily insertions add to the prestige and reputation of the advertiser, for they indicate that he has day-in-and-day-out values for Freeman reader shoppers—values that are important enough to be publicized. Joneses Blank Grunies 10-0; Colonials Play Here Tuesday

Dairymen Cash in On Nine Errors to Help Win Contest

George Celuch Fans Seven Bakers, Allows Four Hits — Walks Mar Sleight's Hurling

Jones Dairy administered a sound 10-0 whitewashing to Grunwalds in last night's City League encounter at the Athletic Field. With young George Celuch handling the kalsomine brush, the Dairymen capitalized on nine Bakers' miscues, six walks and three hits to rack up their first win. Earl "Red" Sleight, making his first start for the Doughboys, allowed but three safe slaps but the Bakers' ragged defense kept him behind the eight ball all the way. Played before a shivering band of bleacherites, the contest soon became a comedy of errors and a veritable nightmare to the Grunies' infielders.

Capitalizing on every opportunity, Jones racked up seven tallies in the first two frames for a commanding edge with nary a hit being chalked up. Four walks, two errors by Minasian and several mental miscues tallied four runs for the Dairymen before a Lamb-Dulin-Peper twin-killing ended the opening frame. Three more runs crossed in the second on a trio of free tickets, errors by Lamb and Minasian. Speed Scherer beat out a bunt for the butter and egg boys initial hit in the third as the Jonesmen added another marker on Johnny Berardi's sacrifice fly.

Celuch Goes Great Celuch flashed fine form in his seasonal mound debut, fanning seven Bakerboys and issuing only two passes. Celuch whiffed the side in the second and scattered four hits effectively over the six-inning distance. The slim right-hander was never in trouble and didn't allow more than one hit per inning. Sleight gave only three hits, but six walks kept him on the frying pan. Grunies' infield collapse ruined Sleight's effort with the usually reliable quartet blundering eight times, Eddie Minasian being the chief offender with five miscues. Gil Kelder muffed a fly in short left for the other misdeed. Jones blundered twice but came up with several fielding gems to keep Celuch out of hot water.

American Tennis Inherits Hecht

New York, May 13 (AP)—American tennis probably has fallen permanently heir to Ladislav Hecht, the former Czech Davis Cup star and one of the world's most promising young players. Hecht came over as a member of the Czech delegation to the World's Fair, just before his homeland was taken over by Germany. Now he considers himself a refugee and intends to apply for American citizenship.

He is not, of course, eligible to play on the American Davis Cup team. In a practice match yesterday Hecht had little difficulty defeating Berkeley Bell, the professional, 6-4, 6-4 and he was far too good for Mrs. Helen Willis Moody.

Independents and Joneses Will Meet On Monday Night

Jones Dairy and Jack Dawkins' Independents collide on Monday night at the Athletic Field in the season's first four-star diamond duel. The contest, originally slated for the league opener, was rained out last Tuesday but will get under way Monday at 6:15. With both clubs having one win to their credit, the league leadership goes to the victor in the season's first "crucial" game.

Rivalry runs high between the two outstanding contenders and a bristling diamond duel is expected to be on tap for the twilight league patrons. Bob "Scholboy" Bush will hurl for the business boys while Captain George Zadany can call upon Joe Brown, Chick, Charley Neff or George Celuch for the hill work. Both squads flashed fine form to date and will be out for a win Monday to jump into the league leadership.

SKEETER WEBB: Lightest Man in Majors?

By RAY BLOSSER
Cleveland, (AP)—Jimmy (Skeeter) Webb took a look at a Cleveland Indians' roster, saw his weight listed as 150 pounds, and drawled: "I never weighed 150 pounds in my life. I just put that down." The Cleveland shortstop, a key in Manager Oscar Vitt's intentions to lock a long-existing defensive gap around second base, says his weight actually is but 145 pounds. That makes him, he believes, the lightest regular in the majors.

MAJOR LEAGUE ROUNDUP

(By The Associated Press)

There should be room in the record after nearly a month of major league competition for an appraisal of the three managers plucked out of hidden corners in the minors last winter to guide the two St. Louis clubs and Philadelphia's punchy Phillies.

Managers have been brought into the big tent from the side shows before, but probably none have been as little heralded as Ray Blades, who graduated from the Rochester farm in the International League to the St. Louis Cardinals; Fred Haney, who moved from Toledo in the American Association to the Browns; and Dr. J. Thompson Prothro, who stepped from Little Rock in the Southern Association to the Phillies.

Taking over clubs which finished seventh or last in 1938, this trio has made their charges something to be reckoned with. Today the Cardinals are in first place in the National League and the Phillies in sixth. The Browns are parked in sixth in the American League.

The Cardinals stopped the Cincinnati Reds 8-7 yesterday for their fourth consecutive victory. Johnny Mize hit two home runs and Pepper Martin one to account for seven of the winners' runs, and another holdover from the Gashouse Gang area, Joe Medwick, took over the batting lead in the league.

Keystone Problem
Blades still is searching for an other starting pitcher; he also has a problem around the key-stone sack—evidenced by the fact the Cardinals have produced only seven double plays in 17 games. But some of this trouble was due to experimentation during the early days of the season and Veterans Jim Brown and Stu Martin ought to do better now that they have displaced rookie hopefuls.

Prothro has the Phillies punchy all right. Three of them are among the senior circuit's ten leading hitters and Moe Aronovich is tied for the lead in runs batted in with 20.

They toppled the New York Giants 10 to 6 yesterday, scoring their first run on a double steal, and getting the clinching runs in the eighth inning on Aronovich's third homer of the year with two on base.

Haney has the Browns doing the same sort of tricks. The American League's leading batter is Mel Mazera with a .475 mark. The team is second only to the New York Yankees in team batting and the pitching has been shaping up to expectations.

Right now the ace of the mound staff is Rookie Jack Kramer, who won his first victory without a setback by shutting out the Detroit Tigers 1-0 on two hits yesterday.

In the abbreviated schedule yesterday caused by teams traveling, there were but two other games, the Boston Bees taking a loose jointed contest from the Brooklyn Dodgers 7-5 and the Chicago White Sox nudging the Cleveland Indians 4-3.

Outboard Arrivals Depend on Weather—Scholarship for Caddies

About the outboard races: If the water is calm tomorrow, the first boat should pass Kingston Point at 8:15 a. m. Chippy water, it'll be 8:45. This is the estimate of Al White, a Poughkeepsie driver in the race. He called on us this morning, enroute to Albany. Woodstock Midget Auto race promoters are praying for clear weather tomorrow, for the opening of their summer schedule. A crowd is anticipated. The time trials will go on at 1 and the races begin at 2 o'clock. Ben Rhymer will have his new midget in the whirl, driven by Len Fanelli. Len was a favorite at the art colony track last summer. Some baseball fans will rejoice in the news about the State League using the Athletic Field. Others may miss their one City League game a week. Attorney Harry H. Fleming deserves a lot of credit for coming to the rescue of baseball. The Athletic Field, over which he holds jurisdiction is the only stadium available with the new stadium still unfinished. He has been more than generous with his lot over a period of years. A group of uptown business men approached him in behalf of the Colonials who bought a franchise in the state loop and then found they had no field.

An amateur boxing show is in the making for next Friday night at the municipal auditorium. Al Weil, No. 1 fight manager, has added a new heavyweight to his string. He is Max Marek, Chicago better. Marek trimmed Joe Louis when the champ was an amateur. Hugh Duffy, 70-year-old coach of the Red Sox, is the cleanest speaking man in baseball, according to Lawrence Skiddy, of the Syracuse Herald. On his way to the Conn vs. Keeler fight, Joe Louis called on his old pal, Jesse Owens, in Cleveland. A friend, reports Eddie Brietz, of The Associated Press, bet Sammy Sneed he couldn't take one club and break 90 on his home course. Sammy used a sand wedge and came through with an 87. Ohio is getting ready to announce a golf prize for caddies with the prize a college scholarship.

Rhymer's Car to Race at Woodstock Sunday

Len Fanelli, New Rochelle midget racing driver, will pilot Ben Rhymer's new $1,200 midget which was built at the latter's garage on Albany avenue during the winter. A break from the weather man is all that the fans and 40 racers need for the first show of the season which will begin tomorrow at 1 p. m., with time trials, and eight races at 2 o'clock. Rain tonight will not spoil the track, however, since new drainage has been installed. Legion Speedway directors expect an attendance of 7,500. There is plenty of free parking space for everyone.

Powerboat Men Will Assist in Outboard Races

The Kingston Powerboat Association will play an important part in the Albany-New York motorboat races Sunday, with arrangements for an amplifier on a launch anchored off the Kingston Yacht Club, and by contacting Poughkeepsie and Catskill stations on the way, by means of a short wave radio with Walter Lardner at the controls.

Commodore Fred Mower will announce about the various boats as they pass his launch in the Hudson river for the crowd expected to gather around Kingston Point and the Yacht Club. Operator Lardner will procure information from Catskill on positions of the boats, and relay similar news to Poughkeepsie, the halfway mark in the race, so that in case of accidents help may be dispatched more accurately.

In previous years, without these facilities, stranded drivers suffered the inconvenience of long waits before receiving help from stations along the line.

There are 99 entries in the race, 66 outboard hydroplanes, seven outboard runabouts and 26 in the various inboard classes. Among them are the four White brothers of Poughkeepsie and drivers from Newburgh, Staatsburg, Highland, Rhinebeck and Germantown.

Fenske Outruns Celebrated Field

Memphis, Tenn., May 13 (AP)—Chuck Fenske marked up one on the books today—a defeat of Glenn Cunningham, Archie San Romani and Don Lash, three of the country's running milemen, in the smooth stopping Fenske, from the University of Wisconsin, but running unattached, took the featured mile in the Cotton Carnival's track meet last night.

With a burst of speed in the stretch, Fenske moved past Cunningham, and passed San Romani to win by a yard. Cunningham, also unattached, finished third, followed by Lash, Indiana state policeman, and William Southworth, Butler university.

The time was 4:11.5 minutes, a tenth of a second under the meet record.

Practice Game

Grunwalds will play St. Remy in a practice game Sunday at 2 o'clock on the Athletic Field diamond.

New York—Billy Conn, 170½, Pittsburgh, outpointed Solly Krieger, 166, Brooklyn, N. Y., a midweight champion (12).

Po'keepsie Favorites

Best in the west? California's crew defeated Washington as the rowing season opened and appears to be the West's best bet in the Poughkeepsie regatta of 1939. The oarsmen: Bow, Smith, No. 2, Gibson; No. 3, Freeborn; No. 4, Bergh; No. 5, Emerson; No. 9, De Varona; No. 7, Backland; stroke, Roe; cox, J. Dieterich.

Flip of Coin to Decide Whether Grippin or Wife Will Drive Outboard in Sunday Race

Albany, N. Y., May 13 (AP)—The toss of a coin today will decide whether George Grippin of Saratoga Springs, or his wife Kay, will drive their Class B outboard in the 12th Albany to New York motorboat marathon tomorrow.

The boat, christened "Dyckman Street," already is centered in the marathon along with 98 others in the various classes. Grippin has entered the race four times but never finished while his wife came within 35 miles of the goal in 1937 before being forced out.

Entries for the 130-mile Hudson river classic will close this afternoon. Starting times for the various classes are staggered so in theory all the boats will finish at Dyckman street in New York city at the same instant. But only about one in three finishes, sandbars, mudflats and floating debris as well as motor trouble defeating the rest.

Two former winners will brave the race jinx against repeating—Fred Jacoby Jr., North Bergen, N. J., scenic artist, and Clayton Bishop, deputy fire chief of Onset, Mass. No one ever has won the race twice.

Professional drivers far outnumber amateur entries, among whom Art Wulschlager, Cornell University junior, and Jimmy Mullen of Princeton University are outstanding.

Many Prizes

The racers will compete for an array of trophies and $950 in cash prizes. The Hayes-Griffin trophy, original award to the winner, will be returned to competition this year. The driver of the fastest outboard will hold the trophy one year and will receive a replica of it from the donor, John W. Griffin. Other awards include the William Randolph Hearst trophy for the first outboard hydroplane and the Jules Heilner trophy for the first amateur driver.

Starting Time

Class A outboard hydroplanes will start from the local yacht club at 6 a. m. (EST) and should reach the finish line shortly after 9:30 a. m. Other starting times: Class B outboard hydroplanes 6:42:35; Class F outboard hydroplanes 6:48:22; outboard runabouts 7:15; inboard hydroplanes 8; inboard runabouts 8:10.

45,000 Racing Fans Ready To Watch Johnstown Run

Baltimore, Md., May 13 (AP)—The biggest crowd ever to watch a horse race in Maryland—some 45,000 of the turf faithful—headed the Pimlico's time-honored course today to see Johnstown carve himself another notch of fame out of the hides of the three-year-old leaders in the Preakness. No longer were followers of the sport of kings, from the two-buck bettors on to the fellow who patronizes the $50 window, wondering who was going to win the 49th running of this rich-miled-and-three-sixteenth gallop. Virtually to a man, they climbed aboard the Johnstown bandwagon, leaving only the question of record-breaking up in the air. They thought that if Johnstown's entry mate—Mrs. Ogden Phillips' surprise package, Guided Knight—were to win, the little filly from R. J. Kleberg's King Ranch, W. L. Brann's crack mudder, Chaledon, or Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's question mark, Impound, could force him to move under pressure. High Quest's 1:58 1-5 Preakness record of 1934 might take a kicking around.

But, since no horse has ever forced Jockey Jimmy Stout to pour the bat to William Woodward's whirlwind in four 1939 outings, including the Kentucky Derby and the Wood Memorial this development was not considered likely, much less an approach to Pimpon's track mark of 1:56 4-5. Mohawks Coming To Athletic Field For Opening Game

State Leaguers to Share Same Diamond With City Loop—Davi Promises No Conflict

Fred Davi's Colonials open their Eastern New York State Baseball League schedule in Kingston Tuesday evening, at the Athletic Field. Hank Bozzi's Mohawk Giants from Schenectady will be the opponents of the local club, which finally obtained a field through the intercession of an uptown business men's group.

Starting time of the game is 6 o'clock. Toddy Uhl or Charley Neff will do the pitching for the home club, and either Ed Perry or Bob Coleman for the upstate nine, which is a popular club in the league and on the road.

Other teams in the league besides Kingston and Schenectady are Glens Falls, Bennington, Vt., General Electric's Schenectady, Troy Bearcats and Cohoes.

Manager Davi announced about Tuesday's game late yesterday after conferring with Harry H. Fleming about the use of the Athletic Field. A regular game is on tap in the two-loop for Tuesday, but will be shifted and the schedule re-arranged at a meeting in the city hall Monday night, after the match between the Joneses and Independents.

Next week we'll play two games, one Tuesday and another Friday," said Manager Davi, "but after that the State League will book only one contest in Kingston, therefore we won't conflict with the City League, only on one night." The rest of the Colonials' games will be played on the road.

Concerning exhibitions, Davi said he intends to book in some Saturday afternoon dates on the Athletic Field, and a Sunday match now and then. Upon being informed about the use of the Athletic Field for state loop games, Secretary James Geoghan of the City League, stressed the importance of Monday night's meeting for his circuit and urged the attendance of all managers.

In granting permission for use of the Smith avenue lot to the Colonials, Mr. Fleming said, "It was my understanding that all baseball games, City League, State League and others would be played this season at the new stadium uptown. I think that is where they belong." Reports from the city administration are that the stadium won't be ready for use until late in July.

The interests represented by Attorney Fleming have been more than generous with the Athletic Field over a period of years during which Kingston had no municipally owned baseball park, and now wants it for other purposes.

Behind either Uhl or Neff, his pitchers, Davi will use Johnny Schatzel at first base; Charlie Francello, second; Carl Husta, third, and Bill Finger, shortstop. In the outfield will be Bill Thomas, Mac Tiano and Tommy Maines with Lefty Martin and Frank Neff in reserve.

The Colonial schedule for the next few weeks follows: Tuesday, May 16—Mohawk Giants at Kingston. Friday, May 19—Glens Falls at Kingston. Sunday, May 21—Bennington, Vt. at Kingston. Wednesday, May 24—Kingston at Mohawk Giants. Thursday, May 25—General Electric's at Kingston. Friday, May 26—Kingston at Cohoes. Sunday, May 28—Kingston at Troy, 2 p. m. Sunday, May 28—Kingston at General Electric's, 6 p. m. Memorial Day—Cohoes at Kingston.

TWO AGAINST LOVE

by Frances Hanna

The Characters
Jacelyn Russell, beautiful heiress.
Tally Mack, young farmer whose family has inherited half the Russell estate, Seaclyf.

Yesterday: Bob Russell, who is attracted by Gretchen Mack, helps Tally and Gramp build a roadside stand.

Chapter 12 Mad Or Sane?

AFTER the swim Bob joined the Mack family around the square, oilcloth covered table and ate a cold supper of baked beans and potato salad supplemented by quantities of fresh milk.

The meal finished, he stated: "I want to pay for the best food I've ever eaten! Get into your hats and coats, all of you, and I'll take you to a movie in Santa Barbara."

"I've got to read up the dishes," Mrs. Mack excused; "and Gramp is worn out. Besides, Betsy has to go to bed by seven. You take Gretchen and Tally along with you, Bob."

Tally darted a look at his sister's expectant face. He did not quite like the idea of her going out with Bob Russell, yet she certainly deserved some fun.

"Sorry, Bob, don't see how I can go. Too much work to finish. Gretchen, you go on with Bob."

Her thin hands trembled a little. "Just—just a minute, Bob. I'll put on my silk dress and change my shoes and slippers."

When Bob and Tally had gone outside to smoke, Gramp shook a crooked forefinger at Delia. "This is your don't! Sendin' them two young folks alone to a picture show. If Gretchen gets a heartbreak it's your fault! That gallivantin' rich fellow ain't goin' to marry no widow with a sassy kid."

"And why wouldn't he?" Delia demanded. "Gretchen's a good girl and a good housekeeper. She ought to have a young man to be her place."

Grumbling, Gramp extracted his plug of tobacco from his hip pocket, bit into it gingerly and began to chew. "Durned store teeth," he muttered.

Joselyn, having learned to expect the unexpected, was nevertheless very rudely shocked when Bob escorted her down to view the roadside stand the next morning.

It was eleven o'clock and the Macks had already stocked the display shelves with crates of eggs, chickens, of oranges and lemons. A large artistically painted sign fastened up on top of the stand announced the wares they had for sale. Smaller signs were nailed at ten-foot intervals to trees on both sides of the drive.

Joselyn, appalled, clutched at Bob's arm, holding him back; unwilling to step out from the protection of the orange trees into sight of the enemy.

"You were here yesterday, Bob," she accused. "They like you. You might have been able to reason them out of this. How could you let them do such a thing?"

"Let them?" Bob grinned. "Why, I helped them! I painted the signs and made the shelves. It was my idea. Isn't it grand?"

"Have you gone completely mad!" she demanded.

"I've gone completely sane," he contradicted, unflinched. "Listen, Lyn, whether you sympathize or not, the fact remains that these people have to earn their food and clothes and this is the only way they have of doing it. It's decent and it's honest and I say more power to 'em!"

Deeply Grieved

HER lips trembled and tears came dark blue pools of her eyes. When she spoke again her voice was low and bitter.

"You've always scoffed at the things Thorne and I believe in, Bob, yet I thought it merely a pose. I never imagined you would turn against me—oh, Bob, how can you look around you and not be hurt by the despoiling of Seaclyf?"

"That horrible fence—like a prison wall—marring the terrace; cows in the riding stable; chickens on the tennis courts; beds of flowers plowed under to make room for carrots and onions! And now this! Doesn't it mean a thing to you that Seaclyf was built by a great man who became governor of this state?"

That one of the Presidents of the United States visited here? That this place has been the pride of Santa Barbara for years and years? Our own father would have been Mayor of Santa Barbara if he and Mother hadn't been in that terrible accident! I—I love Seaclyf, Bob. It—it's the only home I've ever known—I love its history—and now it is the only way they had not money. I can't believe that she did not foresee what would happen here with their coming. Grandma was hard-headed and practical. I feel sure she would want the Macks to be fed and clothed, don't you? Isn't it better for a family to have the necessities of life than it is to preserve the glory of the past by letting them starve?"

"Thorn offered them five thousand dollars to go away. They refused. We cannot drive them out. The only thing I can do is marry Geoffrey very soon and leave Seaclyf forever. I'm going back to the house. Bob—no, don't come with me."

He watched as she marched with militant steps through the rows of citrus trees.

"Poor kid," he said.

Gretchen, excited and rosy, enormously attractive in a starched housewife's dress of flowered percale, was handing a sack of fruit to a customer as Bob sauntered up to the roadside stand. He waited until she made change and the customer returned to his car.

"Hello," he called. "How's business?"

"Good! I've taken in two dollars and this cent already! Almost enough to buy Betsy a new pair of shoes and material for a dress. Isn't it perfect, Bob? We—we need so many things. It's been so long since we had a dollar that didn't have to go for food. We'll never be able to thank you enough for suggesting this. But your sister—what did she say?"

"Nothing much. You see, she's never been hungry or without money."

"Neither have you."

"No. But I have a good imagination."

Telegram

HE BROKE off as a small human whirlwind descended upon him and wrapped his chubby arms about his legs. "Mister Bob, please! I don't want to steal anything—honest! I didn't steal nothing—honest! I didn't!"

Bob holstered her to his shoulder; wiped her tear-smudged face with his handkerchief. "Nobody's going to spank you, Betsy. What's wrong?"

Gretchen, apprehensive, hurried to them. "What makes you think Uncle Tally will spank you?" she asked, tugging the loose strings of Betsy's worn little shoes, pulling down her dress and pushing the silky black hair from her forehead.

Reassured, pleased to be receiving so much attention, Betsy pursed her small mouth and achieved an injured expression. "I went into Joshlyn's garden and picked a whole big bunch of flowers for Grandma and she was awful mad and she said Uncle Tally would spank me because it was stealing—that stealing, Mister Bob?"

"Well, in a way," he said, suppressing a laugh. "You see, Betsy, those flowers don't belong to you. When you want something that isn't yours you should ask for it first."

Her round black eyes were skeptical. "I wouldn't get 'em if I did. Gramma says I mustn't go on that side of the big fence and I mustn't ever ask Joshlyn's things or bother her."

Gretchen's eyes appealed mutely to Bob. He said, "You're forgiven this time, Betsy, but don't do it again. Every time you get an impulse to trespass you come to me and I'll buy you an ice-cream cone."

"What's—a—an impulse to trespass?" she demanded.

"A feeling that you want to do something you know is naughty. Understand?"

Her eyes glistened impishly. "I want to play with that big doll in Joshlyn's bedroom, Mister Bob. Is that awful bad? If I don't do it will I get ice-cream?"

"If you do it you will get a spanking," Gretchen threatened. "Maybe next week I'll buy you a doll."

"Like Joshlyn's?"

"Better," Bob promised. "I'll see to it myself. And now for the ice-cream. Is it all right if I take her into town, Gretchen?"

Betsy's mother seemed embarrassed. "If you want to."

As Bob carried the little girl to his car and put her in the seat Thorndyke came up. "Going to adopt her?" he queried ironically.

"I might," Bob's voice was cool.

Thorndyke regarded the child with distaste. "You'll spoil her by bringing her on our property, Bob," he said. "She'll never run the place when you have guests and don't want her."

Bob kicked the starter and shoved the gear into reverse. "Oh, shut up," he said. "You and Lyn make me sick. Neither of you have a humane instinct in your blue-blooded carcasses!"

Releasing the brake he stepped on the gas and backed the car around to face the driveway. "Wait a minute!" Thorne yelled. "I want to tell you something."

Bob applied the brakes and leaned over the side of the door. "Well, what is it?"

"I got a wire from Nola. She's flying in from Boston on the afternoon plane. She's coming for a long visit and what she will think about—"

"I don't care what she thinks about anything!" Bob snapped. "She's your fiancée; not mine."

Bob, angered, drove recklessly through the lane between bordering pairs until Betsy touched his arm and asked, "What makes you look so mad, Mister Bob?"

He slowed the car. "Relatives, Betsy. I don't wish them any hard luck but I'd sure like to see them have to earn their bread and butter just once!"

Our Royal Visitors Like To Be Just Folks— But Of Course They Must Think Of Their Job

Britain's king and queen are scheduled to arrive in Canada May 15 and in the United States June 7—the first time British monarchs have visited North America. Their activities will make interesting news, but even more interesting is the story of what this young royal couple really is like. That's the story William McGaffin tells.

London—There's a small town quality about Bert and Betty Windsor that is likely to warm the heart of America when they go calling this June.

Strip them of royalty's trappings, and you have an unpretentious couple who like nothing better than to drop in on the neighbors for a quiet chat.

This, of course, is impossible while they're "on duty" as king and queen of England. But when they get away for their annual vacation in Scotland they visit the villagers, whom they call by their first names, and lead an informal life that would have made some of their noble predecessors gasp.

Not 'Smart Set' Type

Most Englishmen like the picture of simplicity such details build, although critics brand their majesties as dull and colorless.

King George VI, who's 43, and Queen Elizabeth, 38, certainly aren't the type to fit in, say, with the international smart set. They spend a deal of time on their two daughters—Princess Elizabeth, 13, who may succeed her father on the throne, and Princess Margaret Rose, 8.

Their majesties reflect their homespun tastes in innumerable ways.

When they ascended the throne, old friends began to address them as "sir" and "ma'am"—but not for long. "What's wrong with 'Bert' and 'Betty'?" their majesties wanted to know.

He Breaks American

On week-ends at Windsor they prefer to stay at the royal lodge rather than the castle.

On state occasions their majesties order a fancy French menu, but for their everyday meals they relish underdone beef, over-boiled Brussels sprouts and other typically English fare.

But their diet isn't all English. The king has an American breakfast—orange juice, toast and coffee—while the queen's weakness is a huge Scottish tea of weight-producing scones and jam.

Her Majesty, Queen Elizabeth

The queen is a good cook and she keeps the menus balanced and easily digestible. The king has had to watch his diet ever since the World war, when he underwent an operation for duodenal ulcer. He never drinks anything stronger than a weak whiskey and soda and his favorite nightcap is hot milk or cocoa—a habit he acquired in his navy days. The queen sips a glass of wine and smokes occasionally.

Have Old Friends In

Their majesties never have been what you would call society people. Now, of course, they do lots of "must" entertaining, but following that old pattern as closely as they can, they set aside one or two nights a week to have old friends to the palace for dinner and a private movie.

Both enjoy good conversation, at which the queen is especially adept. Both dance well, the king preferring a fox trot, the queen a waltz.

Elizabeth buys all-British clothes and is getting to be something of a style setter, even though her sister-in-law, Marina, the Dutchess of Kent, usually takes top honors with her French chic.

George, however, is the tailors' despair. Tailors tried to build him up after brother Edward left, but gave it up as a bad job.

The queen's wardrobe problem is complicated because she is rather short and plump. That is one reason she favors loose, three-quarter length coats usually trimmed with fur, and two-piece suits.

Helps Her Pick Hats She is fond of halo hats (which the king helps her choose) because they give her height. She wears high-heeled shoes for the same reason.

Gray fox is her favorite fur, blue her favorite color and pearls her favorite jewels.

The queen uses rouge, lipstick and eyeshade lightly, and has a permanent wave in her long, dark hair. She uses a natural shade of nail polish and has never plucked her heavy eyebrows.

Two Million, 'And Worth It'

The king plays tennis and golf and shoots often as the guest or host of J. P. Morgan. His Majesty also fishes, but probably his favorite sport is horseback riding.

The queen is said to be as good at fishing as he and she goes hunting occasionally, but only as a spectator. Hers are the more lady-like recreations—playing the piano and harp and doing needle work.

Both have the British passion for long walks, both enjoy reading. His taste runs to newspapers, novels and biographies.

Ordinarily they arise at 7:30, work from 9 to 5:30 or 6 (the queen using a portable typewriter for her correspondence) and retire at 10:30.

They get more than $2,000,000 a year—and in the opinion of the average Englishman earn every penny of it.

Children Can Prepare Dinners As A Tribute On Mother's Day

By MRS. ALEXANDER GEORGE
AP Feature Service Writer

Once a year, at least, mother should be the guest of honor in her own home—on Mother's Day, of course.

If the children are very young, perhaps dinner in a restaurant will have to be the holiday feature. But if the children are old enough, there's nothing she'd appreciate more than to have them plan and prepare the dinner, giving her an opportunity to do just as she likes.

It's better to plan a simple meal and have it well cooked and attractively served.

For a top-of-the-stove meal, you could serve lamb or veal chops with mashed potatoes and buttered asparagus or beans. That will leave plenty of time for concentrating on a nice salad or dessert.

A gelatin or vegetable mold can be made a day ahead then unmolded on lettuce and topped with salad dressing just before serving.

Fruited Angel Food Cake would be a festive dessert. And it's quite easy to make. Use fresh or canned strawberries as filling for inch-thick layers of angel food cake. Cover top and sides with flavored whipped cream and serve with forks.

You can make an equally delicious dessert by using canned peaches or pears between the layers in place of the berries, and covering it with chocolate sauce.

The ambitious Mother's Day cook can serve fried chicken, buttered new potatoes and creamed carrots, or peas or broccoli are good vegetables to pick from. You could serve a tossed salad—sliced radishes, cucumbers, green pepper, cabbage and lettuce—with cheese dressing, a little Roquefort added to French dressing.

If there's a champion biscuit maker in the house, this is her (or his) time to shine. Serve hot biscuits with currant jelly.

Top off your chicken dinner with ice cream or sherbet (buy that) and some home made cake.

If an oven meal is the choice, select roast beef, lamb, or veal. During the last 40 minutes of cooking, flank the roast with peeled new potatoes and carrots and cook until golden brown. If you're roasting veal add some minced onions and celery for additional flavor.

A variety of salads are good to go with a roast—plain green ones moistened with French dressing, the dresser fruit and vegetable types, with mayonnaise or salad dressing.

Appetizers often appeal to youngsters when preparing meals. Chilled tomato juice, with a dash of lemon juice and horseradish, or fruit juices mixed with a few drops of oil of peppermint, or diced pineapple are good selections. Having this first course on the table when dinner is announced adds a festive note.

Chocolate Half-and-Half

Tapoca Cream

(Serves Eight)

1/3 cup quick-cooking tapioca,

1/2 cup granulated sugar, 1/4 teaspoon salt, 1 or 2 egg whites, stiffly beaten, 1 teaspoon flavoring.

Combine tapioca, sugar, salt, yolks and milk in top of double boiler and stir to break yolks.

Place over rapidly boiling water, bring to scalding point (5 to 7 minutes) and cook 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Remove from boiling water. Fold a small amount into egg white. Add to remaining tapioca and blend.

Col. (Mixture thickens as it cooks.) Add flavoring. Fold chocolate sauce into part of tapioca cream. Chill. Serve in perfect glasses, in alternate layers with plain tapioca cream. Serve with additional chocolate sauce.

Chocolate Sauce

(Makes 2 1/2 Cups)

2 squares unsweetened chocolate, 2 cups milk, 2/3 cup granulated sugar, 2 1/2 tablespoons flour,

1/2 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Add chocolate to milk and heat in double boiler. When chocolate is melted, beat with rotary beating, until blended. Combine sugar, flour and salt. Add gradually to chocolate and cook until thick, stirring constantly. Continue cooking 5 minute, stirring occasionally. Add butter and vanilla.

Spring Mode Fits Mothers To A 'T'

By ADELAIDE KERR
AP Fashion Editor

That famous little girl silhouette has come to town again in new spring and summer clothes for mother!

Designers had young things in mind when they carved out that youthful profile, but now the new mode seems to be better than they thought, for little-girl clothes fit the matron's figure.

Moreover, they give mother the greatest fashion "break" she has ever had, says the clothes counsel for a leading Fifth Avenue shop, who settles each year the wardrobe worries of thousands of women who are frankly fifty or more. Listen to her opinion and some of the tips based on it.

"There's never been a better camouflage for the 'middle aged spread' than the little-girl silhouette, for it falls in soft fullness from the hips and no one can tell what the hip measurement really is. To get the most flattering line, let the skirt remain fitted to the hips and the fullness break from there, seeing that it does not extend too far out on each side.

"If the waistline is no longer slender, be careful to have the jacket fitted at the hips, but not too tight at the waistline, thus drawing attention away from the midriff.

"As far as skirt lengths are concerned, the best effect is obtained with a hemline slightly lower than the bulge in the calf of the leg, which should never show, even in a young girl."

The little-girl silhouette appears in a number of new spring suits for mother designed of sheer wool with gently fitted jackets and gored or pleated skirts. It has also come to town in charming printed ensembles that combine a simple frock (pleated or gored as to skirt) with a trim little jacket. Nearly all the patterns splash a blue, green, or gray background with white.

But there are plenty of other clothes for mothers who want to leave the little-girl silhouette for the younger generation. Sheer wool tailors are cut with fitted hiplength jackets and many coats swing straight from the shoulders. For bridge parties and teas, mother's fashions include a number of crepe frocks in soft blues, hyacinths and grays. There is also a whole fleet of printed ensembles combining a crepe frock or foundation with a sheer redingote stamped with the same print.

The strong spring vogue for white is repeated in straw sailors, flower toques, gloves and lingere touches to smarten dark clothes.

A printed ensemble for mothers who cling to classic lines combines a thistle (cocoa rose) crepe foundation printed in white with a sheer coat of the same printed pattern. Thistle velvet ribbon trims it and orchids give it a festive touch.

Here is a version of the little-girl silhouette in a suit for mother. It is designed of sheer dark blue wool, with a double-breasted fitted jacket and pleated skirt. A veiled white straw sailor and white gloves give it fashion frosting.

A perfect wedding day! The bride, the bride party, the guests—all know the etiquette of their roles.

How does the bride stand at the altar? With her right hand slipped through the groom's left arm. At the reception, correct for her to receive on the groom's right.

Attendants' duties? Ushers escort guests to their seats at the ceremony, to women guests they offer the right arm. At the reception, they show the way to receiving line, refreshments.

The bridesmaids form a semi-circle behind the bride and groom at the altar—later, help to receive reception guests.

Traditional for the maid of honor to arrange the bride's train and veil at the church, hold her bouquet during the ceremony.

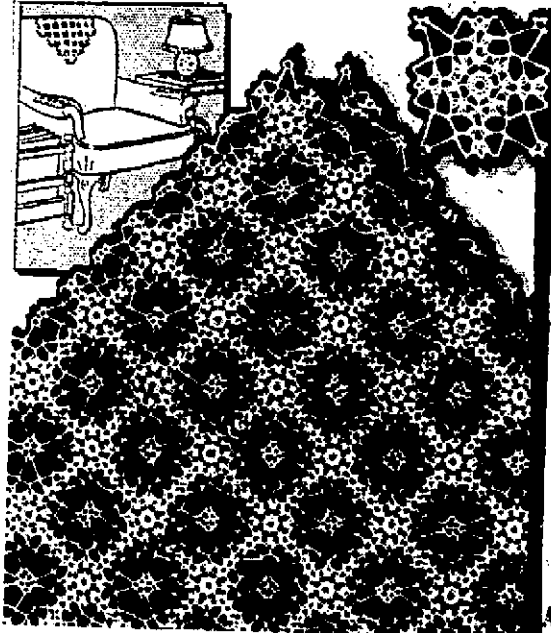

The best man? Most important of his duties is to take charge of the ring, hand it to the groom at the crucial moment.

Etiquette for the bride's family—the wedding guests? All these and many more perplexing questions are answered in our 32-page booklet. Gives etiquette for the entire ceremony and reception, tells how to budget and plan detail—for formal, informal weddings.

Dutch Kas: An Unusual

Among Antiques in U.S.

The Dutch kas, or kasten, was a furniture form brought from the Low Countries. It is unique among American antique pieces in that it was solely by craftsmen of Holland origin or descent from people of the same racial strain and, in consequence, was confined to the sections where the Dutch settled. There were New York, western Long Island, the Hudson River valley and some parts of New Jersey, such as the Hackensack valley.

Always large and imposing, the kas was used for storing linens or other household possessions. It was in favor from the Seventeenth through the Eighteenth centuries.

says "American Collector." Any made afterward would be of rural origin and rank as survival pieces. In construction and decorative details these kases consistently show the stolid characteristic of Dutch craftsmanship. If made of walnut, the decoration was achieved by painting and applied molding in geometric shapes. When of soft wood, such as pine, tulip or red gum, they were generally painted with a decoration of fruits and foliage. Invariably they were provided with bold knobs, front feet and an ample, not too heavy, overhanging cornice. Mushrooms have been cultivated commercially in the United States for less than a half-century.

Miss McVey Wins Tuition at Smith

Miss Wilma McVey, daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. William J. McVey of 195 Tiemper avenue, who is just completing her junior year at Smith College, Northampton, Mass., has been awarded a full tuition scholarship for her senior year.
Scholarships aren't any rarity for Miss McVey. She graduated from Poughkeepsie High School at the age of 16 with a standing in Regents subjects of 98.6 per cent, said to be the record for the Ninth Judicial District as well as for the school. She was given a state scholarship at that time and was also offered a scholarship in Vassar, but declining upon it, she accepted college neither of these were of use to her. However, Smith College awarded her a scholarship for her freshman year on the basis of her high school attainment and she has also been awarded partial scholarships in succeeding years. She is among the first in her class, which numbers 300 students.
In addition to the Scholarship award just given Miss McVey has been selected to act as one of the Junior ushers at the coming graduation exercises and has also been selected one of those who will carry the famous Smith College ivy chain at commencement time.
Miss McVey is taking a pre-medical course at Smith following which she hopes to enter the College of Physicians and Surgeons to continue her education.

Stock Exchange Volume Dropped Lower on Friday

The same time pending question as to whether or not business was to be given relief through tax revisions at this session of Congress, and if so how much, is expected to be the subject of discussion at a conference to be held at the White House on Monday afternoon. Administration and congressional leaders will make an effort to iron out differences of opinion on the subject and agree on a program to be presented to Congress. Tax revision leaders are favoring a four-point program which will include: Adoption of a flat 18 per cent corporation tax and repeal of undistributed profits tax; removal of distinction between corporate capital gains and losses and ordinary income; three-year carry-over for capital losses; retention of capital stock and excess profits taxes, but allowing annual rather than three-year declarations of stock value.

Negotiations for the sale to the Spanish government of at least 50,000 bales of surplus American cotton are well under way with early closing of the deal believed likely. Amount involved is in excess of $2,250,000 at present spot prices for cotton. Export-Import Bank would offer credit to American exporters for major part of the sale.
The huge farm appropriations bill, carrying $1,217,000,000, passed the Senate yesterday. If this record appropriation became law it is expected to benefit largely the nation's two leading mail-order houses, Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward and the makers of agricultural implements.
Detroit sheet steel prices, at about $8 below established prices, are thought to be close to bottom and a major test of the price structure is believed to be imminent. A major steel company is expected to cut to or below the reduced levels in an effort to stabilize the market if large inquiries appear.

Department store sales throughout the nation, during the week ended May 12, dropped three per cent below the like period in 1938, contrasted with a gain of six per cent in the preceding week, according to Federal reserve reports from 265 stores. Part of the decline is due Mother's Day being a week later this year.

Montgomery Ward reported net of $1,423,175, or 78 cents a common share for the quarter ended April 30. This is a new record for the first quarter and compares with net of $2,101,946, or 33 cents a share in the first three months of 1938.

Volume of the Stock Exchange dropped still lower yesterday, the total being 340,000 shares vs. 400,000 Thursday. Losses were shown by all classes of securities. Industrials as measured in the Dow-Jones averages declined 0.76 point, to 132.16; rails lost 0.18 point to 27.13 and utilities were off 0.14 point, to 23.17.
Most commodities turned reactionary and the index was off slightly at the close. Cotton futures were up ten to 100 points, with spot cotton making a new high of 83 cents for May. Wheat at Chicago closed three eighths lower. World sugar closed five to seven points higher.

People's Drug Stores, Inc., declared regular quarterly of 25 cents on common and an extra of 25 cents. St. Joseph Lead declared two quarters of 25 cents on common, first payable June 20 and the second September 20. Continental Steel voted 25 cents. Monarch Machine Tool voted 20 cents.
It was indicated last night that most bituminous coal mines east of the Mississippi will resume operations Monday morning.

League Convenes in Sept.

Geneva, May 13 (AP)—Secretary General Joseph A. C. Aronov of day called the 20th session of the League of Nations assembly for September 11.

New York, May 13 (AP)—Recovery signs appeared in today's brief stock market proceedings, but in most cases, they were so faint as to be barely discernible.

It was a crawling session throughout with transfers of approximately 375,000 shares among the smallest in nearly a year. While fractional gains were plentiful at the close, numerous issues were unchanged and an assortment of minor declines was in evidence.

Traders were scarce in boardrooms, the majority feeling there was scant profit in attending a two-hour performance which, judging by the past several weeks, would be without any real interest.

Sentiment seemed to be slightly improved as recently waning hopes for tax revision in congress revived a trifle.

Brooklyn Union Gas stock and bonds again touched new highs for the year in the wake of optimistic earnings forecasts for this company.
Steels were resistant despite further reports of price cutting in this field.

Small advances at one time or another were posted for U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Montgomery Ward, Standard Oil of N. J., Consolidated Edison, Southern Railway, Westinghouse, International Harvester, Deere, Allied Chemical, Eastern Kodak and Glenn Martin. Some of these eventually slipped.

Douglas Aircraft marked up a modest gain following the concern's report for the fiscal quarter ended February 28, revealing the highest net for any single quarter in its history.

Fractional advances were scored in the curb market by American Cyanamid 'B' and Niagara Hudson Power. Creole Petroleum and Northern States Power 'A' shaded lower.

Driving Hazards Greater in 1939

Biggest Travel Year in Our History Spells More Accidents

MINNEAPOLIS.—Chances are about one in twenty that your family car will be involved in a crash this year in which someone will be killed or injured. The chances are one in five or better that you will witness such a crash, or reach the scene soon enough to be of help, and you need to know only a few simple first-aid rules, according to the medical department of Northwestern National Life Insurance company.
Driving hazards will be greater in 1939, the report warns. Indications are for the biggest travel year in the country's history. With two world's fairs in operation, there will be more fast, long-distance traffic on the highways. There will be more strange drivers hurrying through cities and towns, unfamiliar with local driving rules and customs. These conditions spell more accidents, and close to a million and a quarter casualties in 1939.

Accidents More Serious.
Injuries in motor accidents today are much more serious, on the average, than a few years ago, due to faster driving. More multiple fractures of the lower limbs occur. Skull fractures are more frequent. More spinal injuries are found, due to the whiplash effect of collisions at high speed.

Collaborating with hospital receiving ward surgeons, the insurance medics suggest seven simple rules which will prevent many a death and shorten many a traffic victim's recovery:

1. Switch off the ignition of any car that has been involved in an accident. If there is a smell of leaking gasoline, keep smokers away.
2. Don't move the victim unless the accident has left him where he is exposed to further injury, or in a very uncomfortable physical position. In such a case, move him slowly, carefully, and only as far as is absolutely necessary. Moving victims often causes a fractured bone to jam through the flesh, causing much graver injury; spinal injuries may be made fatal by movement.
3. If the victim is not breathing, use artificial respiration at once.
4. Cover victim with coats or blankets and keep him warm. Crash injuries are nearly always accompanied by shock, which calls for warmth, and a position with the head lower than the feet.

In Case of Bleeding.
5. If there is severe bleeding, apply a pad of the cleanest material available, with pressure enough to check bleeding. If bleeding is from a cut on a limb, a tourniquet may be used instead, between the wound and the heart.

6. Send somebody to summon a policeman or highway patrolman at once while you call the nearest doctor; if no doctor is immediately available and injury seems serious, phone the nearest emergency hospital for an ambulance. Be careful to give clear directions for reaching the spot.
7. Do not attempt to transport victim in a private car, unless certain his injuries are trivial. Anyone with serious injuries should be moved only in a reclining position, which is impossible in a passenger automobile.

Has Safety Lock That

Is Knobless and Keyless

LONDON.—An amateur lifesaver, who has rescued 28 people from drowning, hopes to save thousands more from death by a safety lock he has invented and patented.
He is F. Reavell, Nottingham hotel owner, and his invention was inspired by the death of a friend, Sir John Rees, who was killed when he opened the wrong door of a railway car.
Foolproof and simple, the safety lock can be applied to railway trains, planes, cars, or anything with a door on it. It enables a driver of a train to lock every door securely by operating a lever. Pilots of planes will be able to lock the doors of the plane from the cockpit, and motorists will be able to do likewise by moving a lever on the dashboard.
The lock dispenses with keyholes, knobs or spindles.

Candidate Fails to

Poll Single-Ballot

KLERKSDORP, TRANSVAAL.—One of the candidates in the recent municipal elections at Klerksdorp did not poll a vote, although his campaign had been supported by 23 registered voters.
It is believed that this is the first time in the history of the union that a candidate has failed to poll a single vote in municipal elections.
The candidate was C. B. Westcott. His opponents, J. J. Smith and J. Bezuidenhout, polled 377 and 148 votes, respectively.

FISHERMAN SAVED IN TUB

William Ross, (above) a Gloucester fisherman all his life but unable to swim, was asleep on the schooner Edith C. Rose when it collided with the Isabelle Parker and sank 100 miles off the Atlantic coast. He saved his life by tossing a tub overboard and jumping into it. One of the 48 men on board the two boats died, but the remainder were saved.

Co. M. Veterans Reunion Tonight

Members of the old 14th Separate Company of Kingston, later known as Co. M of the 1st New York Volunteer Infantry, tonight will celebrate the anniversary of their departure from Kingston—May 2, 1898—in answer to the call for volunteers to fight in the Spanish-American War. This will be the 41st anniversary.
Out of 103 members, excluding the officers, who left Kingston, but 45 are still living to carry on the traditions of bygone years.
Officers who have answered the last roll call are Captain Robert F. Tompkins and 2nd Lieutenant John A. Huhne. Surviving officers are 1st Lieut. David Terry and Lieut. Joseph M. Fowler. Two sergeants survive, 1st Sergeant William G. Merritt and Sergeant J. Allan Wood, now chief of police. Out of 12 corporals two are living, Charles H. Smith of New York city and David Boyd of Kingston.
Tonight's celebration will be held at Torino's Inn on the South Boulevard of the Ashokan reservoir, at six o'clock. Members will meet at the Municipal Auditorium at five o'clock, where transportation will be provided. Invited guests will be Mayor C. J. Heiselein, City Clerk E. J. Dempsey and Capt. James E. Roach of Albany, former commander of the U. S. W. of New York state.
Committee in charge of arrangements is Roswell Coles, Charles S. Keefe and Egbert D. Schoonmaker. It is expected that with invited guests and those from other companies who were in the regiment there will be an attendance of at least 40.
Those who have died since the last reunion are David Winter and Frederick Lynes.

Never Learned to Pray

Houston, Tex., May 13 (AP)—A young woman who succeeded her mother in wedlock followed her in suicide, leaving a verse saying she had never learned to pray.
Justice Tom Mues returned a verdict of suicide by poison in the death yesterday of Mrs. Ilyne Willis, 18. Found near the body was a badly-written verse which told of a mind in turmoil because "she could not ask God to help her out—for she had never learned to pray." Mues said the young woman married her stepfather, D. F. Willis, 47, August 16, 1938. Her mother committed suicide by poison February 16, 1938.

Merivale Dies

London, May 13 (AP)—Bernard Merivale, British dramatist, died Friday at the age of 56. He was born July 15, 1882, in Newcastle-on-Tyne and after graduation from St. John's College, Cambridge, wrote 12 plays, including A House Divided, Mr. Peter and the Night Hawk.

Lunch Wagon Moved

The lunch wagon which has stood on central Broadway opposite the municipal auditorium for a number of years, was removed from its foundations on Friday afternoon and trucked to the freight house of the West Shore railroad. The work was done by Van Eitten & Hogan. The lunch wagon is to be replaced by another larger and more modern wagon, and will be operated by parties from New Jersey. The lunch wagon that was moved yesterday is to be shipped to Rochester.

Admiral Bristol Dies at Capital

under the secretary of state. China was undergoing a national movement similar to that which Admiral Bristol had seen develop in Turkey, so in June, 1927, he was designated commander-in-chief of the Asiatic fleet, serving in Chinese waters for nearly two years.
Although perhaps best known for his diplomatic service, Admiral Bristol served through two wars with high credit.
As a lieutenant aboard the Texas in 1898 he took part in the battle of Santiago, which destroyed Spain's naval power.
In the World War he commanded successfully the battleships North Carolina and Oklahoma and the United States naval base at Plymouth, England, where he helped coordinate the American and British sea forces.
He was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal "for exceptionally meritorious service in a duty of great responsibility in command of the U. S. S. Oklahoma, operating in the war zone in association and cooperation with British naval forces."
Born in Glassboro, N. J., April 17, 1888, he was appointed to the naval academy from that state in 1883. All-around service in many parts of the world prepared him for his career as a high-ranking officer. He was a lieutenant commander when on June 1, 1906, he married Helen Beverly Moore of Mobile, Ala.
One of the navy's foremost authorities on gunnery, torpedoes and aircraft, Admiral Bristol was made a member of the general board at the navy department upon his return from the China station in 1929.
